NEW BOOKS.

From the publishers; for sale by Jas. S. Waters: NORTH AMERICA. By ANTHONY TROLLOPE. J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia. 2 vols. in one; 12mo.

"To write a book about the United States," says Mr. Trollope, in his Introduction, "has been the ambition of my literary life." The object has been attained; the ambition has been gratified. If we are to judge of the scope of that ambition by the merits of the production, we must do Mr. Trollope the justice to say that at least it was modest.—Having made up his mind to see the whole of the United States, and to write about its social and political condition, prior to the breaking out of the war, Mr. Trollope was not deterred from the prosecution of his project by the disruption of the country, nor discouraged by the fact that he would be unable to travel through an immense section of the country he was going to write about.—It never seems to have occurred to him, while writing about the bitterness of partisan spirit and the great unanimity of partisan opinion that pervaded the North, that he himself can hardly have lived and moved exclusively among them, for several months, without becoming in some degree affected by the contagion which surrounded him; and that, if he really wished to write fairly and honestly about the two sections of the country, he could have done it much better at home, removed from the influence of party feeling and sectionalism. The book is essentially what its title pronounces it. It is North America—and North America only. It should be, rather, the Free States of North America. The author, during his stay in this country, did not travel in the Southern States. Access to them was difficult, and he abandoned the idea of visiting them. He contented himself by getting the best ideas he could of the people of the South and their country, and the state of things in that country, from the more or less moderate men in the Northern States with whom it was his lot occasionally to be thrown.—What need we wonder, then, when Mr. Trollope treats of political economy, constitutional liberty, or the cause and probable results of the war—for he discusses all these topics and a great many more—that we find his remarks always bearing more or less the indelible marks of Northern association?—Not that we mean to say that Mr. Trollope is very prejudiced or very unfair—for he is not. Indeed, considering the influences by which he was surrounded, and the tendencies of his own mind, it is rather remarkable that he should have succeeded in being as truthful as he often is. In his speculations as to the result of the present struggle, Mr. Trollope differs, probably, very widely from many of our readers. He believes that the Union is broken, but he does not believe that any but the Cotton States will be able to accomplish their independence. The line of separation he places south of Virginia; the Gulf States, he predicts, will be left to themselves; and the North will profit and grow rich by their loss. Mr. Trollope's sympathies are with the North as a nation. He believes in the advancement of a free, enlightened, democratic people; but at the same time he neither approves of nor endorses entirely the means resorted to by the Federals to reduce, by tyrannical subjugation, a restless and dissatisfied population to loyal and peace-loving citizens. To our own city he devotes but a few pages. From them we extract the following passage relating to Gen. Dix and the difficulties on Federal Hill. General Dix, he says, "did me the honor to take me to the top of Federal Hill, a suburb of the city, on which he had raised great earthworks and planted mighty cannons, and out of these and among the soldiery, and to show me how instantaneously he could destroy the town from his exalted position. "This hill was made for the very purpose," said "General Dix; and no doubt he thought so. Generals, when they have fine positions and big guns and prostrate people lying under their thumbs, are inclined to think that God's providence has "specially ordained them and their points of vantage. It is a good thing in the mind of a general "so circumstanced that 200,000 men should be made "subject to a dozen big guns. I confess that to me, "having had no military education, the matter appeared in a different light, and I could not work "up my enthusiasm to a pitch which would have "been suitable to the General's courtesy. That "hill, on which many of the poor of Baltimore had "lived, was desecrated in my eyes by those columns. The neat earthworks were ugly, as looked "upon by me; and though I regarded General "Dix as energetic, and no doubt skilful in the "work assigned to him, I could not sympathize "with his exultation."

In this company we leave Mr. Trollope, without further comment. In similar company he formed most of the opinions now made public. The work is pleasantly and intelligently written, as its author always writes. But, as we said before, the book is a book about the Free States, and not about the United States.

From the publishers; for sale by Jas. S. Waters: STUDENTS ABROAD. By RICHARD B. KIMBALL, New York: G. P. Putnam. 1 vol. 12mo., pp. 201.

A pleasantly and well told collection of little stories. The sketches are mostly of French life, and are strung together, apparently, as they have been picked up here and there, and connected by a slender thread of narrative, just sufficient to link them into a chain. The whole is thrown somewhat into the shape of a sentimental journey, which probably would have been more sentimental had not the ramblings of the Student confined him so closely to Paris. Of Students and Student Life, the author tells us little. Indeed, the romance that pervades almost all of the stories tells more of the poet and the artist. The book gives promise of even better things, and will be found attractive, especially by the younger portion of our readers.

From the the publishers; for sale by James Sherby, 15 St. Paul street:

CHAMBERS' ENCYCLOPEDIA. Part 49. For to Fr. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co.

This number contains some very interesting and comparatively late statistics of France.

From the same; for sale by James Sherby:

THE BOOK OF DAYS (Chambers): A Miscellany of Popular Antiquities in connection with the Calendar, &c. Parts 1 to 4. Commencing with New Year's Day and ending with February 14 St. Valentine's Day. J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia.

This work is of the same size and similar style as the Encyclopedia now in course of publication. The name of W. and R. Chambers, Edinburgh, stamps it as a first-class work. As for its contents, they are so varied and interesting that it is difficult to say what it does not contain.

PENNSYLVANIA DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

At the Democratic State Convention which was held at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, on the 4th of July, resolutions were adopted sustaining the Union as it was and the Constitution as it is; declaring that the true and only object of the war is to restore the Union and enforce the laws; denouncing the reckless extravagance of some departments of the Federal Government and also the Republican party as one of fanatical aim and crime; opposing sectional legislation and extreme parties, but supporting the Government in the use of all constitutional measures to put an end to the war. In addition to the above the following resolutions were passed:

RESOLVED 7. That the Constitution and the laws are sufficient for any emergency, and that the suppression of the freedom of speech and of the press, and the unlawful arrest of citizens, and the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in violation of the Constitution in States where the civil authorities are unimpeded in all attempts dangerous to civil liberty, and should be resisted at the ballot-box by every freeman in the land

8. That this is a Government of white men, and was established exclusively for the white race; that the negro race are not entitled to, and ought not to be admitted to political or social equality with the white race, but that it is our duty to treat them with kindness and consideration as an inferior but dependent race; that the right of the several States to determine the position and duty of the several races is a sovereign right, and the pledges of the Constitution require us, as loyal citizens, not to interfere therein.

9. That Congress has no power to deprive any person of his property for any criminal offence, unless that person has first been duly convicted of the offence by the verdict of a jury, and that all acts of Congress like those lately passed by the House of Representatives, which assume to forfeit or confiscate the estates of men for offences of which they have not been convicted by due trial by jury, are unconstitutional and lead to oppression and tyranny. It is no justification for such acts that the crimes committed in the prosecution of the rebellion are of unexampled atrocity, nor is there any such justification as State necessity known to our Government or laws.

The new Congressional Districts of Maine have been so arranged as to throw Hon. S. C. Fessenden, of the Third district, and Hon. Frederick A. Pike, of the Sixth, into the same district—the new Fifth. A Republican nominating convention was held on the 2d instant, and Mr. Pike received the nomination for the next Congress. This closes the door against Mr. Fessenden.

LATEST FROM KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 17, 1862.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE COUGH and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them, I was free to confess it was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the idea of deriving any good from them; but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D., Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 North Liberty street, Baltimore, at 10 cents per package. Sold also by all the principal Druggists. Je21-tf

BALTIMORE, July 1st, 1862.
The undersigned, Agent for the State of Maryland, has great confidence in commending to the public this old and well established Institution.
The Company was founded in 1820, and has since that period afforded its strength and punctuality in the settlement of losses to the families of some of our own citizens.
It is the part of wisdom, especially in these days of calamity, to provide for the dependents one who are to survive us, and the undersigned asserts with the utmost confidence, that no surer method of performing this duty can be devised than by securing a Life Policy in this stable, solid old Company. Her assetts are beyond the contingencies to which those of our own home Companies are unfortunately exposed; while the following certificate from Mr. Barnes, the Superintendent of the New York Insurance Bureau at Albany, will show that, independent of their massive home assets, securities to the extent of $100,000 have been lodged with him for the especial protection of the American Policy holder.
