Two French noblemen of the highest rank, accompanied by a gentleman of this kingdom, arrived in yesterday's packet.

Nov. 30 The solitary state of Great-Britain while the power of Europe now is divided in two houses, is the consequence of that unfortunate system of politics which began in this reign.

Ye, even in this situation, what might Britain not do, if she were delivered from that more than hostile force which is nourished in her own bowels...

Dec. 1. On Friday morning Stephen Sayre, Esq; formerly sheriff of this city, but since one of the members of Congress in America, set off for Madrid...

Great-Britain is almost the only nation, whose vessels the Algerines always treat with respect. This circumstance, however, is matter of very little exultation...

Dec. 5. The influence of a ready money market cannot be more forcibly exemplified, than by a fact in the fur trade.

The London market make their payment for these skins, in ready money, or what is the same thing in any sort of commodities.

Dec. 7. There is in Berlin, and in every considerable town in the Prussian dominions, a certain edifice, properly furnished and properly attended, to which every unmarried woman who has the misfortune of being with child may repair...

Dec. 10. The late treaty between the French and the Dutch is by no means a pleasing circumstance for this country; the former having thus secured to themselves an additional naval force...

give them such a decided superiority as will most probably oblige this nation to look out for some foreign connexion as a counterpoise to it.

Extract of a letter from Brussels, November 27.

The exchange of the forts and territories, according to the articles of the late treaty between the emperor and Holland, is supposed by this time to have taken place...

Dec. 12 The American colours are not allowed to be hoisted in the Tagus, or in any other of the Portuguese harbours; the American traders therefore display la pavillion de France...

The accession of William IX. landgrave of Hesse Cassel to the German league, if it should take place, will certainly give a powerful sanction to the confederacy; the more so yet, by uniting the county of Hanau to his late father's landgraviate...

Extract of a letter from Paris, December 1.

All political operations continue to be covered with an impenetrable veil—we hear, however, from Versailles, that George the third is to be nominated a mediator, in order to bring to a conclusion the proposed adjustment between the Germanic body and the court of Vienna...

By a letter from a gentleman at Bourdeaux, we learn, that such was the effect of the last dry and warm season on the vintage of France, that the memory of man has not witnessed such a grape harvest: wine is so plenty as to be sold for a few shillings a hoghead...

B O S T O N, February 2.

Extract of a letter from London, to Mr. Jones, at the American coffee-house, dated December 14, 1785.

Captain Cushing from Boston, arrived here the first of December. The Ceres, captain Fletcher, struck on the sands near Bologne, on the coast of France, on the night of the 27th of November; and captain Scott, who is gone thither to endeavour saving the ship, has wrote that she will be lost.

N E W - H A V E N, February 2.

Yesterday, at a quarter before four o'clock in the afternoon, was observed here the phenomenon of three parhelia, which attended the sun, and were conspicuously displayed in the heavens.

ranged in a circular manner as around the centre of the solar images. Above the whole, and at a considerable distance from the upper part of the arch surrounding the sun, was suspended an inverted rainbow of prismatic arch or light.
