MONDAY, AUGUST 4, 1862.

From the New York Times, August 2.

THE POSITION ON THE PENINSULA.

The telegrapher at Harrison's Landing informs us, in regard to the cannonade opened by the Confederates on Thursday night, that "the Confederates had it all their own way for some time, as our troops did not anticipate an attack." It is difficult to conjecture what is anticipated by Gen. McClellan's army. Isolated in a hostile country, with enemies swarming in every bush, bivouacked in every grove, latent behind every point of vantage, outnumbering our diminished force three to one—so daring as to capture a schooner in mid-river where the water is covered with National vessels, and so active that their batteries present themselves daily at some new spot on the bank; with all these intimations that the Confederates have not laid down their arms, or offered an armistice, it might be supposed that our troops could not be surprised by any attack—that our Generals would always be prepared and on the watch. An attack from the very quarter whence this was made has certainly been anticipated by the people at large, and has, in fact, been for several days a principal source of public anxiety. There has seemed to be no reason why the enemy—holding the entire south bank of the James, and able to bring his artillery and mortars to bear upon the National encampments and gunboats—should not shower a storm of shot and shell into our lines at any moment.—Whatever might be the amazement of the astonished telegrapher at this catastrophe, he may rest assured there is no one elsewhere to share it.

But whatever the previous dangers from this source have been, the apprehension may now be laid aside. The appearance of Commodore Porter's mortar fleet in the James river renders General McClellan secure from the enemy's river batteries opposite his lines or below them. It makes it impracticable for the Confederates to continue at their labor of throwing up earthworks, planting guns and massing troops at points most convenient for operating against him. The mortar boats, in conjunction with the fleet of gunboats already in the James, will be enabled to keep up a ceaseless shower of metal, solid and explosive, at all points on the river from which the Confederates can annoy our shipping, interrupt our lines of communication, or operate effectively against Harrison's Point. They are able to drive away, or drive back, the Confederates who, on the south side of the James, have crossed the Appomattox, and seem of late to be attempting to form convenient lodgments. And in regard to the interruption of the navigation of the James river, there can be no danger whatever, now that such a tremendous combined fleet plows its waters and rakes its shores by night and by day. So far as any apprehensions may have been entertained for the safety of General McClellan's army, they may be dismissed. If he cannot, as yet, attack the Confederate army with assurance of success, there is not force enough in all Virginia, nor in all Rebeldom, to make a successful attack upon his position.

In regard again to the transportation of Gen. McClellan's army from Harrison's Point to a more convenient base for active operations against Richmond—if such a measure should have been projected, or should be thought desirable, the difficulties, at first sight, seem great; and great enough they undoubtedly would be, if we had not the means we already have for overcoming them. But they have been greatly exaggerated. Gen. McClellan could move his entire army and all his materiel from the Peninsula before the Confederates could by any possibility so mass their forces, or prepare batteries, as to seriously interfere with the work, or molest any part of his force. There is an enormous fleet of steam and other transports already in the James river and at Hampton Roads—precisely how many the Navy Department only can tell, and the public do not care to know, so long as they are assured that it is sufficient to answer any exigency.

These vessels and transports were sent there, in the first instance, not for any such purpose as to carry General McClellan's army down the river, or across it even; but they are none the less available for the work on that account. Under convoy of the gunboats, under guardianship of the mortar fleet, these transports can navigate the James with as much safety as if there was not a Confederate gun on either of its banks. It is now seen to be more than likely, since we have learned of the movements and developments of the last few days, but that he will remain there for the brief time necessary to give him strength to march onward to Richmond. But the public need to be in no way perturbed as to his ample ability to defend himself from a land attack, and, if it is deemed advisable, to carry his army safely down the James, or transfer it to the other side.

The Confederate boasts as to what their new Merrimac (or Richmond) and its consort ram are going to do against Gen. McClellan's army, and against our navy, are preposterous. We have a far greater naval force in the James now, than we had when the first Merrimac committed self-slaughter, because, as its commander has confessed, the contest with the National fleet was hopeless; and that naval force, if properly and boldly handled, is sufficient to fight and destroy half a dozen Merrimacs. We learn this morning, from one of our special correspondents with the army—what we had not previously learned by telegraph—that the new Confederate monster made its appearance on Wednesday last, and our fleet was promptly drawn up to give it battle. Of the issue of the contest which seems to be impending, neither Wilkes nor McClellan have any fear.

From all the Confederate movements, it appears from this distance that they feel the need of making some demonstration against Gen. McClellan as soon as they possibly can. Our army, however, is still strong, well intrenched and well protected; and our navy, always invincible, is now marshaled in a force far greater than ever before, and in a position where it can render more effective service than on any previous occasion. If the Confederates provoke an engagement, they may be grievously disappointed in its issue.

THE PURPOSES OF THE WAR.

From the Boston Courier, Aug. 2.

The great question, which every day is bringing rapidly to a final solution, is this—Is the contest national or sectional? Are we to fight for the Constitution, or for mere party ends? Clearly, we shall not be contending for the institutions, and consequently, not for the principles of our fathers, unless we fight for the sole purpose of re-establishing the laws of the land in their primitive character and meaning over the revolted territory. Of this, Congress was well aware, last summer, when it passed the resolution, supposed to have been expedited on its way through both branches by the occurrence at Bull Run—substantially, that this was not a war for conquest or subjugation, nor one to be pursued in any vindictive spirit, but that as soon as the constitutional authority of the Government was recognized over the country, the war ought to come to an end.

If, however, Mr. Wilson's programme of military operations is to be carried out, then that Congressional resolution goes for nothing. We are then fighting for the most selfish and the most criminal purposes—to emancipate the slaves, to exterminate the masters, to divide the conquered territory among the soldiers of the victorious army! According to the best of our recollection, this goes a little beyond any purpose openly professed by any conqueror of ancient or modern times. Even in barbarous ages, the disturbance of the domestic usages of a conquered people has not been attempted; and in more modern times, it has been reserved for the class of men who sympathise with Mr. Wilson, to propose extermination and indiscriminate plunder as the object of war.

As we write, a communication reaches us from another of the "New England Clergy," in the interior of the State, stating that petitions are going round for signatures, to induce the President to change his present policy—that is, to adopt the emancipation—extermination—partition-of-territory scheme. We have no doubt that these petitions will find signers to a considerable extent, and that among the names will be found only too many of the New England clergy. We must say, that we never heard of them before; for this class of people work in secret, so far as possible, and their deeds cannot bear the light of day. Will they have any effect upon Mr. Lincoln? We are confident they will not. He seems to us to have developed his policy clearly enough, in his reply to the "progressive friends" who waited upon him, some weeks ago, and his reply is understood to have been of precisely the same tenor to a meddlesome committee from New York, which has just endeavored to persuade him into the adoption of radical measures. Mr. Lincoln, we believe, will refuse to issue any such proclamations as these pestilent "troublers of Israel" call for. He knows that they would be of no effect whatever at the South, except to extinguish any glimmering spark of hope for the Union, and that they could only still further divide us at the North, which, he said, in his address to the border Slave States, in consequence of these very divisions, was even now "none too strong." To adopt the schemes of the radicals, would be to take away from the nation its only true element of strength, founded upon justice and patriotism, upon regard for man and fear of God.

A LOSING SPECULATION.—A few months since some of the Secesh prisoners in Fort Warren deposited their funds, consisting of gold coin, with the sutler at that post for safe keeping. Thinking, no doubt, that he could turn a penny, as gold was eight per cent. premium, he brought it to the city, and disposed of it to a broker at that rate. A day or two since the prisoners, having been notified of their release, made demand on the sutler for their funds. The sutler, after trying in vain to induce them to take treasury notes, was under the necessity of repurchasing the gold at a premium of eighteen per cent., by which nice little financial operation he is several hundred dollars out of pocket.

The prospects for a heavy crop of peaches, we learn from all quarters, was never better. The trees are laden with incipient fruit. In Delaware they expect to sell peaches in October for fifty cents a bushel.

This gentleman has, by his thorough knowledge of his business, and personal attention thereto, obtained a well deserved reputation for the finest goods in his line, and we confidently recommend all who desire a really fine "imported" HAVANA CIGAR and superior Chewing TOBACCO, SNUFF &c., &c., to give him a call. THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months, during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we scrib ribbles, partially, our old vocation of "enlightening the world with lamp black." Our Press, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "THE SOUTH, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping thereby that medium to say sin ourselves and those dependent upon us and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our Job PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE COUGH and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them, I was free to confess it was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the idea of deriving any good from them; but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D., Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.
