The South.

OPERATIONS OF THE PATENT OFFICE—THE MECHANIC ARTS IN THE SOUTH.

The Patent Office is one of the institutions of the Government which noiselessly pursues the tenor of its way, and has, under the good management of its head, Hon. Mr. Rhodes, Commissioner, proved a complete success even in this early stage of its existence. The office is located in the third story of the Government building, on Ninth street, where a spacious hall, open to visitors at suitable hours every day, is appropriated to the exhibition of models of ingenious inventions, and such curious relics as may be presented by those who desire to increase its attractions. It has already developed the interesting fact that the South possesses all the elements of mechanical genius necessary to the industrial progress of a nation, and has had no occasion to call upon the Government for an appropriation to meet its liabilities. It sustains itself, and in every respect responds to the purposes for which it was established. We append a list of the patents already issued for new inventions, omitting a large number of United States patents renewed, and several applications now on file:

This will be made apparent to any one who may examine the models in the exhibition room of the Patent Office.—Richmond Dispatch.
