MARYLAND PECULIARLY FORTUNATE AS MATTERS HAVE TURNED OUT.

If there are those in Maryland who yet feel aggrieved by the adoption of a free Constitution, who consider those aggressive who have urged this great measure to a conclusion, let them remember that according to the declarations of those who brought the evil of the greatest war ever known upon the country, slavery is responsible for it, mainly. Whilst we know that towering ambition had much to do with it, and the greed for gain much also, we must take the declarations of the chief agencies of revolution themselves as evidence of the main causes of the evils upon us of a divided sentiment and States in hostility to one another. "Slavery is the immediate "cause of the existence of the Confederacy," said the Charleston Mercury in March, 1861, after the rebellious organization was in full blast; and the truth is patent to the world; and that being the fact, wise men in dealing with great evils will go to the root of them as has been done in our own State. "Slavery "has been the vital agent of this great contro "versy. It has energized the arm of every man "who acts a part in this great drama." Such is the language of Mr. Spratt, one of the most trusted counsellors and oracles of the South in De Bow's Review, and when these evidences from the advocates of the rebellion South, could be multiplied almost indefinitely, shall we not accept their declarations, and deal with the cause of our troubles without being amenable to blame from those in the same interest here?

We, in Maryland, have extirpated so far as it is within our scope, our province, all that stands betwixt us and a permanent condition of peace with the Government; a Government intended to be the freest upon earth, and it remains for every State to do the same, voluntarily or by compulsion, if we are ever to have "peace" on this continent. Not recognizing that absolute necessity, not consenting to that as final, the war might go on for twenty years, or to that extent that only utter exhaustion might terminate it temporarily, and still society would have no guarantee of a continuous peace. And if the men who have plunged us into this war tell us this, insist upon it that the antagonisms created by slavery never can be gotten over, if day by day come to us the evidences of a fierceness and rancor culminating in the destruction on the battle field such as never was before known, are we to wait for something more convincing still, to enable us to content heartily to the change that has taken place?

But really, have we not great cause for thankfulness here in Maryland that the evils of the hour have not visited us more heavily? Will men never realize, even those who think they have most cause for complaint, that our State has escaped in a manner marvellous to consider, when we think of the perils that impended over us in the outset? To those who think we have no cause for thankfulness, we say let such visit Virginia, let them follow in the track of the armies that have made that once beautiful region one scene of desolation, as one or the other has swept over it, and then fancy what would have been our fate had the seat of the war been transferred hither in compliance with the wishes,—yes the wishes of such men as ex-Governor Lowe and others, who were eager to sacrifice the State to the selfish behests of South Carolina. Disappointed and compelled to flee the State and city he would have involved in the ruin brought upon Virginia, who does not recollect that famous manifesto in which he proposed handing over to the rebel confederacy our splendid commercial metropolis, with its monuments and noble edifices, "a blackened ruin!" Why this was the very spirit of diabolism itself, the determination to destroy utterly where he might not rule; and is it nothing now to look back upon this, and then contemplate the present, and the bright and glorious future that opens upon us?

Why, considering the provocations the opponents of the rebellion here have received, considering the persistent efforts made to bring the war right upon our homes, who can feel otherwise than that both people and Government have been to the last degree forbearing, considerate in going no farther to destroy the causes of the rebellion than has been done. Whilst dealing with the confessed causes of the conflict, they have not imitated the example set them by Southern communities in persecuting and driving out those opposed to them, and this, too, whilst aware that these home allies of the rebellion had the highest hopes at one time that Lee or Stonewall Jackson would bring their myrmidons upon us, to plunder and murder, to rack the city it was plain they could never hold but they even obtained an entrance into it.

As matters go, when months seem years whilst the anxieties and perils of civil war, that climax of long past, are comparatively but dimly remembered. Yet in reckoning up the causes for complaint or congratulation, they ought not to be forgotten, and more especially when we know that still there is a large party in the State, yet mad enough to cherish some hope of a turn in affairs, by which the "peace" candidates being elected and the rebellion conceded a success, Maryland might yet, on a question of "boundaries" be swept within the rule of the Richmond dynasty.

Finally, it is for the people of Maryland themselves, the Unionists here, to do their part to make the change just wrought here a permanency, to forever extinguish every hope of the revolution backward, still cherished. Until this is effectually accomplished, there are thousands here who will yet watch and wait, who will not if possible, accept the destiny now promised to the State. Once compelled to dismiss all speculations as to a different future from that promised by the New Constitution, once convinced that they may as well bend to the force of circumstances, and thereupon all would unite in sliding to send the State forward in the pathway marked out, and which promises for us unequalled prosperity. Another effort and the final verdict will be rendered, the victory for free government will be won. Shall it not be made, will not all arouse themselves for a last great struggle, completing what has been so well begun? We all want "peace." Let us by one more week's labor in the good cause achieve a peace that shall gladden the hearts of the millions waiting for it.

FROM HAGERSTOWN.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 31—[Special to the Washington Star.]—Gen. Custar has not yet returned from his pursuit of the guerilla party which captured Gen Duffie while on his way from Winchester to this place, in a two-horse spring wagon, belonging to Mr. G. W. Middlekauff. Gen Duffie was, at the time of his capture, commander of this post, and has been succeeded by Gen. Max Weber, who has established his headquarters in the Washington House. Gen. Weber is in bad health, and keeps to his room except when business calls him out.

It is anticipated that a considerable number of troops will winter here, and preparations are being made to receive them. Gen. Sheridan's dismounted cavalry camp has been removed from Martinsburg to Hagerstown, and is now located on the farm of Mr. Joseph B. Lowe. There are between three and four thousand men in camp, the majority of whom are of Averill's old command. During last week the camp was visited by a paymaster, who paid off the troops.

Eight hundred head of stock, captured in the Valley, and composed of young colts, brood mares, hogs, sheep, cows, &c., were driven through here into Pennsylvania a few days ago under the charge of Capt. Parkhurst and 100 men.

Capt. Wm H. Brown, of the 6th regular cavalry, has been appointed Chief Quartermaster of Cavalry in Gen. Sheridan's army, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. Capt. B. is a native of this State, and his promotion is a deserved one.

Capt. Hopkins is Quartermaster at this post, and Capt. Boone, of the 1st Virginia cavalry, is Provost Marshal. Capt. Boone is the same officer who in August last fought a hard-to-hand conflict with the rebel Gen. McCausland in the streets of Hagerstown, and who was wounded by McCausland's negro servant.

Sheridan's successes in the Valley have caused a feeling of security to prevail here, and our merchants are again laying in heavy stocks of goods for the fall and winter trade.

As a large quantity of abandoned Government property is scattered throughout Washington and Frederick counties, detective David Sowders is actively engaged in gathering it up and turning it in to the proper authorities. Since August he has recovered about $40,000 worth.

Hagerstown district lacks but three men of filling its quota under the last call of the President. The original quota of the district was 64 men.

Politics are running high here, and the McClellan men are straining every nerve to carry the State. On Saturday, the county Union convention nominated Elias Davis, of Boonsboro', for State Senator, in place of Joe Davis, of Funkstown, declined.

Capt. W. H Perkins, of the 1st Michigan cavalry, which was stationed at the 7th street barracks, in your city, has been mustered out, and has arrived here from Gen Sheridan's army, en route to Washington, to settle up his ordnance accounts.

THE ST. ALBANS RAIDERS.—The St. Albans Messenger says: "From all we can gather from those of our citizens who have visited Montreal and other sections of Canada, the feeling is very strong in our favor. The people of Montreal declare with much emphasis that the desperadoes will, as a matter of course, be given up to our authorities. Men high in official positions are taking hold of the matter in earnest and doing everything to bring the raiders to justice. It seems that several of the raiding party had been lounging about Montreal for several weeks, and the names of some of them are registered on the hotel books of that city. At St. Johns, particularly, is a strong friendly feeling manifested. The citizens of that enterprising town take a most lively interest in the matter. Our citizens, who have been and are still there, are treated in the most hospitable manner. By voice and act they have done much to aid in capturing the marauders and express not only their willingness but determination to "follow up."

AN ELEPHANT AND BULL FIGHT.—When the elephant was brought to the Place les Tauraux a new young bull was turned out. The bull advanced against his terrible adversary without the slightest fear. He attempted to flank him, in order to wound him; but the elephant, exhibiting an equal agility in his motions, did not suffer him to approach. Finally the bull attacked him in front; but, everywhere confronted by the formidable tusks, which interposed an impracticable barrier, he did not succeed in wounding him. At last, in one of his assaults, the bull succeeded in thrusting his head beneath the tusks; but before he could penetrate the tough hide of the elephant he fell to the earth. The spectators only saw the elephant bend his head slightly and rest the extremities of his tusks, which had been plugged, upon the back of the bull. From that moment the bull was hors du combat, and when they afterwards killed him it was found that three ribs were completely crushed by the almost imperceptible movement the elephant had made in holding him with his tusks.

THE CONFEDERATE LOAN.—A correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser thus writes from London:

The Confederate loan continues to experience violent fluctuations. The weak cotton speculators at Liverpool were mostly holders of it, and their fall has caused numerous amounts to be forced upon the market. As the regular dealers in it were few in number, this pressure would of itself have been enough to cause a ruinous decline, but as it was coincident with the arrival of the news of the defeat of Early in the Shenandoah Valley, its severity was greatly exaggerated.—From 65, which was the price touched two months ago, there has been a daily drop, until yesterday transactions took place at 50. To day the final price is 53.

FRENCH WOMEN EMIGRATING.—The journals of Brest, France, announce the departure from that port of the frigate Sybille, with a convoy of emigrants for the French colony of New Caledonia, in the Pacific. The Sybille has already made three voyages with emigrants, many of whom have since married young women brought up by public charity in France, and who had voluntarily gone out. These women received dowries from the Empress, and are so well satisfied with their lot, that several have written to Paris to induce their former companions to follow. Regular communications have been established between Port de France, the chief town of the colony, and Sydney in Australia.

☞ A voter in Massachusetts recovered $5,000 from the Selectmen for refusing to put his name on the poll list.

This is the way that Commodore Vanderbilt, who controls the Harlem Railroad, and Jerome, who controls the Hudson River Railroad, got possession of the Raritan and Delaware Bay Railroad:—After securing the home stock and bonds, a large amount still remained in the hands of English holders. To obtain this, agents were dispatched to England, the most profitable trains ceased running on the road, heavy expenses were incurred by the construction of enormous piers at Port Monmouth, the Raritan Bay terminus, and in a hundred other ways the receipts decreased, while the expenses increased to such an extent that the frightened Englishmen gladly transferred their bonds into the hands of the agents, who obligingly purchased them at their own risk. Now they have bought the Camden and Atlantic Railroad, and are going to have a through line between New York and Philadelphia that shall be independent of the Camden and Amboy monopoly.—Pittsburg Commercial.

☞ Andy Johnson has put the whole slavery question into a nut-shell. In a recent speech he says, the great issue is, "Shall the institution of slavery control the Government of the United States, or shall the Government control it? Shall the Government control its institution, or shall they control it?" Mr. Johnson has no exalted opinion of the common wish-wash about compromise, and referring to the rebels and the Crittenden Compromise he says, "all the talk of them and their Northern coadjutors, then and since, about compromise, has been sheer hypocrisy—a mere pretense to delude the people."

☞ A block of marble, wrought in Italy for the South Carolina State House, now surmounts the firemen's monument in Chicago cemetery, having been confiscated in trying to run the blockade to its original destination.

☞ The shipments of black walnut lumber from Toledo, during the season, have amounted to 23,464,000 feet, of which 20,551,700 feet went to Bedford.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.—In a recent issue of the London Times, we find an interesting article on wine and its consumption in past years in England. We make the following extract:

America now produces a wine excellent in quality and exquisite in flavor, as all testify who have tasted the Sambucca wine of Mr. A. Speer, of New Jersey, U. S. A. In our perambulations through Spain, France and Portugal we acquired some experience in wine, and have tasted none to excel the Sambucca vintage of America. In our opinion, this wine cannot fail of success. It is already attracting considerable attention in London and Paris, and with the ladies will become a general favorite on account of its non-intoxicating properties.—London Times.

CURE YOUR COUGHS.—Forest Juniper Tar is warranted to cure any case of cough, throat or lung disease, arising from colds, in an incredibly short time, no matter of what nature or of how long standing, with absolute certainty. We say this emphatically, and stake the price of the medicine in all cases on our assertion.
