Q About what time—when is the latest you can now recall having heard declarations of that sort, at Richmond? The time after the battle of Chancellorsville, when, I do not know what General it was, but believe it was General Hampton, was on a raid near Richmond; at that time I heard it; I was in Richmond on a furlough at the same time.

Q Whenever and wherever spoken of, do I understand you to say that this sentiment of the necessity of the assassination of the President of the United States was generally assented to in the service? A Yes, sir.

Q The "detached service" of which you speak, on which these parties were to be sent, you say related to Canada and the destruction of the Northern cities along the Canada frontier? A It was outside of the Confederate lines—either here in the Northern cities or in Canada.

Q You spoke of laying the Northern cities in ashes; did you understand that that was the mode in which that warfare was to be conducted? A Yes, sir, by firing the cities down and getting the people dissatisfied with the war, and by that means to bring forward a revolution amongst the people in the North.

a witness called for the prosecution, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Q Will you state whether or not, in the month of November last, you were riding in the railroad cars of New York city, the Third avenue cars, and whether you observed that there were two men in the cars that attracted your attention, one of whom, on leaving the cars, dropped a letter which you picked up? A I was going down to the city; there were two gentlemen in the car; one of them said he would leave for Washington the day after to-morrow, and the other was going to Newburgh or Newburgh that night; they left the car; the man that was sitting near me pushed his hat forward, and with that pushed his whiskers at the same time; they were false whiskers; the front face was much darker than it was under the whiskers.

Q Was he a young man? A He was.

Q Do you think you would recognize his features again? A I think I should.

Q (Exhibiting to the witness the photograph of Booth.) Look at that and say whether it recalls him to you? A The face is the same; he had a scar on his right cheek.

Q Did any of the conversation fall on your ears? A I overheard him say he would leave for Washington the day after to-morrow.

Q You say he seemed very angry because it had not fallen to his lot to go to Washington instead of the other? A He said he had letters of my own to post at the Nassau st. postoffice; one of them left about Twenty-sixth or Twenty-seventh street, and as he left I moved up into his place; the car was crowded; my daughter said I had dropped one of my letters; she picked up something and gave it to me; when I went down to the Brevoort, where I was going with my child, I went to take out of my pocket book, and I saw an envelope with two letters in it.

The letters were then presented and read to the Commission, as follows:

"Dear Lewis—The time has at last come that we have all so wished for, and upon you everything depends. As it was decided before you left, we were to cast lots, and accordingly, we did so, and you are to be the Charlotte Corday of the nineteenth century. Whom you remember the fearful, solemn vow that was taken by us, you know we feel there is no draw back—the man is doomed, and you can choose your weapons. The cup, the knife, the ball. The cap failed us once, and may fail again. Johnson, who will give this, is between life and an enraged demon since the meeting, because it has not fallen on him to rid the world of the monster. He says the blood of his gray-haired father and noble brother call upon him for revenge, and revenge he will have. If he cannot wreak it upon the fountain head, he will upon some of the blood-thirsty generals. Butler would suit him. As our plans were all concerted and well arranged, we separated, and as I am writing—on my way to Detroit—I will only say that all rests upon you. You know where to find your friends. Your disguises are so perfect and complete, that without our knew your face, no feline telegraphic despatch would catch you. The English gentleman, Hardcastle, must not be hastily. Remember, he has staid days. Strike for your home, strike for your country; hide your time, but strike sure. Get introduced, congratulate him. Listen to his stories; many more will the brute tell to earthly friends. Do anything but fail, and meet us at the appointed place within the fortnight. Recore this note together with one of your letters. I will give the reason for this when we meet. Return by Johnson. I wish I could go to you, but duty calls me to the West; you will probably hear from me in Washington. Saunders is doing us no good in Canada.

"Believe me, your brother in love,

"CHARLES SHERRY."

"NY. LOTTS, October 21, 1864.

"Dearest Husband:—Why do you not come home? You let me for ten days only, and now you have been from home more than two weeks. In that long time you only sent me one short note—a few cold words—and a check for money, which I do not require. What has come over you? Have you forgotten your wife and child? Baby calls for papa until my heart aches. We are lonely without you. I have written to you again and again, and, as a last resource, yesterday wrote to Charles, begging him to see you and tell you to come home. I am so ill, not able to leave my room; if I was I would go to you wherever you were, if in this world. Mamma says I must not write any more, as I am too weak. Louis, darling, do not stay away any longer from your heart-broken wife.

"LEENIA."

AN ALARMING FEAT OF A SOMNAMBULIST.—The St. Louis Democrat of Tuesday has the following. The Democrat states that it has every reason to believe the incident to be perfectly true:

"Last Saturday night two brothers named Corby, recently from Ireland, were sleeping in a room at a boarding house. One of them arose from his bed in his sleep, raised the window, and notwithstanding the efforts of his brother to restrain him, leaped from the third story, striking against the railing twenty or thirty feet below, and breaking it to pieces. He lit on his feet and ran at a furious pace, and leaped over a ten-foot fence, when he was overtaken by his friends. He appeared to be in a terrible state of alarm, and imagined that he was in a boat on the ocean, and cried out, 'The boat is on fire, and they are after me!' He was at length aroused from his sleep, and was astonished to find that he was on the street, with only his shirt and drawers on. The strange part of the affair is that he was not injured in the slightest degree by the fall. It is supposed that Corby was dreaming of the burning of the ill fated Sultana, and imagined that he was on board."

RATHER ROMANTIC—Who will not say that there is romance in history, even the restricted history of the family circle?

Some years ago a man already married in a distant city, wooed, won, and espoused a young lady of Nashville. Not long afterward the original wife hunted up her truant lord and master, and he paid the penalty of loving not wisely but too well by serving a brief term in the penitentiary. Receiving executive clemency, he returned to his first wife, but some time after she died. After a due lapse of time, he again married the second wife, the one whom cruel fate and prior claims robbed of her liege, and they have renewed their blissful honeymoon.

☞ From the report of the Franco-Polish Committee it appears that 2000 Poles are literally dying of hunger in Paris. Several have been found in the Seine during the past week, and three have been reported by the police as having died of hunger.

☞ Wendell Phillips said in his New Year anniversary speech that the rebels thought we were weak, but Sherman wrote with the point of his sword, in letters forty miles long, on the town of South Carolina, that we were strong.

☞ Sergeant Joseph Cameron, now on duty at Fort Washington, near Washington, has been in the service since 1806—two years longer than General Scott. His promotion has certainly not been rapid.

☞ Mr. Sheridale Bennett's famous "Mayflower" held recently at Cock's & Co.'s auction for £115 6s, a pretty round sum for an old copyright.

☞ Mr. Peter F. Rosengarten, for nearly a quarter of a century foreman of the bookbindery of Messrs. Harper and Brothers, N. Y., died on Saturday last.

☞ It is well established that there are no counterfeit United States bonds in circulation either here or in Europe.

☞ Mr. Plant, the weather prophet, of Birmingham, says the summer in England will be the hottest they have had since 1859.

☞ The completion of the exchange of prisoners leaves about seventy thousand rebels on our hands.

☞ Some of the shrewd shoddyites of the South put all their rebel currency into land, and now own thousands of acres.

☞ A rival Menken is traveling in England who "outstripes" even Adah Isaacs.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Fourth of July—In behalf of our sister cities preparations are already being made for celebrating the approaching eighty-ninth anniversary of our Independence, and we think it would be exceedingly proper that our own city should be doing something in this matter. We have a great deal to celebrate. The close of a long and a bloody war, which has cost us millions of money and thousands of lives, is something which we can all rejoice over, and the fact that "the Constitution and the Laws" have triumphed and are now the governing powers of the land, is the source of the greatest joy to all patriotic hearts. We have also to greet the thousands of our fellow-citizens, fathers, husbands and brothers, whom we have not seen since the outbreak of the rebellion. In view of all these things we should have on the Fourth of July next a regular good old fashioned celebration. In years gone by what a glorious day the Fourth was! It was the one great day of the nation; a day in which every one felt that he was a resident, and a part of a great country.

And at this time we can feel more than ever, that ours is a great country, the most powerful on earth, having withstood the shock of an internal warfare. Then we felt that our country was powerful because it had beaten off foreign foes and had thrown off the yoke of England. Now we know that it is truly powerful inasmuch as it has conquered the evil portion of ourselves, has asserted the power of our Constitution. Let us have a good celebration, let every one feel that the Fourth of July comes but once a year, and such a one as that of 1865, never before. Let every one join in and have a day not soon to be forgotten by any who participate in its celebration.

Since writing the above we learn that the dual branch of the City Council has adopted a resolution appropriating $2,000 for the proposed celebration.

Storage of Coal Oil.—A proposition is now before the City Council for the establishment of a coal oil depot in our city; and as there is a variety of opinions in relation to the propriety of such establishments in the more thickly settled portions of the city, the attention of the City Council has been called to the fact that there is on the Canton Company's grounds location peculiarly adapted for receiving, storing or manufacturing petroleum oil. The Company contemplate appropriating from twenty to thirty squares of ground for this purpose exclusively on that part of the Company's lands near the Lazaretto, enclosed within their lines of 7th and 11th streets, and between the 5th and 12th avenues, as laid down on the plats of the Company. These lots are especially adapted to the storage and manufacture of petroleum, being accessible by good private roads, and affording convenient communication by railroad, the Philadelphia Railroad being in close proximity, and the necessary water front of the harbor and river being close by.

A large body of water from ten to twelve feet deep runs into the river from the rear of the lots, and there are now but few buildings of any importance on the ground proposed to be set apart for the manufacture and shipment of Petroleum. Avenues extending from Eastern Avenue to the river will be opened to pass through this land, and an opportunity is now offered to store Petroleum at a point convenient to the city by land and water and at a point where it will not molest the neighborhood.

The Military Commission—Yesterday the Military Commission of which Major W. P. Lord, of the 1st Delaware Cavalry, is judge advocate, met at its rooms on Holliday street, but owing to the absence of Col. Bowman, who was called away on special business at Washington, the court adjourned without trying any further cases. The trial in the case of Avery Taylor was completed, signed and sent to headquarters. This party was acquitted by the court on account of the evidence of witnesses for the prosecution not sustaining the charges as preferred on the testimony taken before the Provost Marshal.

Testimony was introduced in the case of L. O. Crance, of which John Wills, Esq., was counsel, was completed yesterday. John Dash, a citizen of this city will be tried this morning. The papers in a large number of cases yet awaiting trial are being examined and prepared by Major Lord with the usual energy and diligence which characterizes him.

Drowning Case.—The body of a colored man, apparently thirty five years of age, was found on Monday evening floating near the water gear Fort McHenry. An inquest was held by Coroner Thomas, the jury rendering a verdict of accidental drowning. The body was deposited in Potter's Field. On Monday afternoon the body of Peter Stephenson, a native of Sweden, found floating on the water at the foot of Bell's wharf, Fells Point. An inquest was held by Coroner Sparklin, the jury rendering a verdict of accidental drowning. The parents of the lad reside at 31 Fell street.

The Beer War—On Monday night last, a large meeting of the lager beer dealers in this city held a meeting on Eastern Avenue, for the purpose of devising means to head off the action of the brewers in raising the price of beer. It was proposed at the meeting to form a stock company with the capital of $500,000, to consist of 20,000 shares, at $25 a share, and to erect a brewery in the western section of the city, contiguous to the old Alms House. The brewers of the city, last night held a meeting, but we did not learn the action of the body.

An Excursion to Richmond.—An informal meeting of both branches of the City Council was held last evening, for the purpose of making arrangements for an excursion to Norfolk, Portsmouth, Petersburg and Richmond, at an early date. The following gentlemen were appointed to make the necessary arrangements: Messrs. Hatch, Evans and Ewing, first branch. McClymont, Nalls and Hatch, second branch. The excursion will probably be enjoyed in the second week of June.

Looking Cheerful.—About the most cheerful looking people seen upon our streets now, are our soldiers, and well they may be, in prospect of an honorable discharge from an honorable service in which they have won peace, glory, honor and renown for the whole country. The comforts of peace and home will have a double relish for them when they return to their families. God bless the soldiers, say we.

Improving.—The lad, James Ward, who was injured on Saturday last, by thoughtlessly thrusting his hand between the cogs of a machine used for freezing ice cream, is rapidly recovering under the skillful treatment of Dr. Wanson. On Sunday it was feared that the lad would be attacked with lock jaw, but fortunately such a misfortune has been averted.

Bad Children—Julia, Amelia and Charles Bowersmith were arrested yesterday, charged with beating their mother. The parties reside on Broadway, near Orleans street, and the mother was shamefully beaten because of a dispute in relation to household duties.—Justice Whalen released the accused on security for court.

A Pleasant Drink—Our young and enterprising friends Joseph T Baxter and Jerry S. Johnson, have purchased that well known mineral water saloon on Baltimore street opposite Holliday, and are prepared to furnish the thirsty with the purest articles of mineral and soda waters, lock and mead.

Passing Counterfeit Money.—William Gardner and Geo Baker, were arrested on Monday night, charged with passing $60 counterfeit treasury notes. The accused were committed for a hearing before U. States Marshal Hanna.

Assaulted his Wife.—Edward Brimeger was arrested on Monday night on the charge of ill treating and shamefully abusing his wife; also, with being drunk. Justice Spicer fined the accused $1 and costs.

Beating.—Israel Miller was arrested yesterday, charged with beating Hugh Larkes, residing 26 Green street. Justice Johnson released the accused on security for court.

Shameful—John Evans was arrested on Monday night, charged with assaulting and threatening his father and brother. Justice Dryden committed the accused to jail.

SUSPICIOUS FOREKNOWLEDGE OF THE ASSASSINATION OF THE PRESIDENT, BY REBEL SYMPATHIZERS IN ENGLAND.—The Liverpool Weekly Mercury of the 22d of April contains an account of the arrest by the police and the trial by the courts of thirty four persons who were engaged in cock fighting. As the officer entered the pit where the fight was in progress, he heard the parties who were watching it cry out, "go it Booth," "well done Booth," "I'll bet £50 on Davies," &c. The fight must have taken place within two or three days after Booth committed his murderous deed, and before intelligence of it could possibly have reached England. The names of the parties arrested are not given, but it is evident they were Southern rebels or rebel sympathizers. It is a singular circumstance, if they had no knowledge of the assassin's work which had been assigned to Booth, that they should have used his name in this connection and in the way they did. It would at least be interesting to know who the parties were and how long they had been in England.

☞ W. L. Hindman, Attorney for the State of West Virginia, has issued a proclamation to all rebels who have borne arms or held offices or sympathized with the cause of rebellion, warning them that if they do not conform to the law requiring them to take the oath to support the Constitution of the United States and of West Virginia, they will be liable to a fine of one hundred dollars and imprisonment for thirty days, for the first offense, and double that penalty for the second.

AMUSEMENTS.

Holliday Street Theatre.—Another brilliant audience greeted the Keans last night; and when we say that these persons realized the highest pleasure by the performance, we but reiterate the general opinion of those competent to judge. Of Mr. Kean's impersonation of Louis XI, we cannot our inability to speak in such terms of praise as it merited; it was matchless, perfect, and life-like, displaying not only the highest histrionic skill and ability, but the most thorough study. The picture he presents of the worn-out, crafty and dissembling King; his weakness, his sufferings and his fears; his cruelty, his cutlass and his superstition—were all brought so vividly before the mind, that we forgot the actor, and saw before us only the King. It was in truth a great performance, and richly merited the warm applause bestowed upon it. Mrs. Kean had but a small part, but she made the most of it; and indeed, cannot many to regret that it was not more prominent. The other characters were well sustained by the Kean party and the members of the regular company.

Tonight, Shakspeare's beautiful play of the "Merchant of Venice" will be given from the original text, for the first time in Baltimore. Mr. Kean will appear as Shylock, and Mrs. Kean as Portia—characters which they personate in the most effective and artistic manner. They will be sustained by the same admirable support as before; and there will doubtless be another brilliant house.

Signor Blitz—This skillful and exceedingly popular master of necromancy and ventriloquism nightly attracts to the Maryland Institute large audiences of our most influential citizens. The various illusions presented by the Signor are entirely new to this public, and the dexterity with which he performs his tricks excites in the mind of the beholder a lively sensation of wonderment. His educated canary birds exhibit a training that completely bewilders the owners. They fire off pistols, trundle wheelbarrows, march in procession, and perform many other strange things. A matinee will be given to-morrow afternoon.

The Seven Sisters.—This burlesque spectacle continues to attract large audiences at the Front Street Theatre. Lotta, as usual, being the principal attraction. She will conclude her brilliant engagement on Saturday evening next.

The Concert To Night.—The concert to be given to night at the New Assembly Rooms, promises to be a brilliant affair, as the artists who will appear are well known to our citizens. It is needless to speak of this class of their great talents.
