THE TRUE SOURCES OF GREATNESS IN STATES.

The terrible conflict from which this country has just emerged will have lost half its value as a lesson, if the South has not discerned one great leading fact in regard to what constitutes national strength, or the power of individual States; and that is—that men, not territory make communities great and powerful.—The Southern statesmen—so they considered themselves—were possessed for nearly half a century with the leading idea—the mischievous error—that the more territory they could acquire, the more strength would they secure to their section; and so they were unceasing in their endeavors to create new States which they had not the power to colonize or "settle." At a time when after a most eager struggle they had acquired Texas—a region larger than France—a territory where you might travel days without meeting a human being, they began the struggle for Kansas; and so demented were they in regard to this matter, that they could not see—although they had previously had the rapid settlement of California before their eyes,—that in the race for precedence based on the presence of population, they must inevitably come out second best. Angry and disappointed, they resorted to violence, the leaders gathering from Missouri and Arkansas especially, those bands of "border ruffians," whose presence anywhere was a signal of violence even before the war, in order to intimidate and drive back the wave of freemen who were resorting thither. To settle Kansas, after their fashion, that is, to have its nominal possession conceded to them, they were ready to depopulate even poor old South Carolina, which in the race for precedence had been steadily falling behind because of the doubly "heavy weight" of slavery she was doomed to carry. And so it was, that whilst the quiet observer saw the tens of thousands forming that vast stream of emigration which has so quickly made the mighty Northwest, and which besides has overflowed and peopled the shores of the Pacific itself, whilst this stream was seen covering and taking actual possession of Kansas, at the same time was seen a few petty lands wending their way thither with pistols and the inevitable bowie knife, to protest—in their way—against giving it up.

Well, of course, the game went as it had previously gone in California,—the great law of numbers, of majorities, settled the matter. But after all, it was hard to concede the result, and further than this—very extreme results. It drove them mad to realize—as they began to do in a dim sort of way,—that the vast and increasing tide of humanity which surged hither and yon from the older nationalities and States, would not permit them to play on this continent much longer the part of the "dog in the manger." Seeking to make their section another Japan, zealously watching lest some one should come amongst them inimical to their cherished "peculiar institution," they expected somehow to perform the sheerest impossibility—to run the race for empire successfully, with territory as against men. They scoffed at men, but they would have land. And in the very face of their own compelled halt in the march, and of the mighty onward progress the great free States were making, at a time when they could not people Texas nor fold Kansas, they projected the extension of their empire towards "Mexico" and the Gulf, they expected by some miracle to spread themselves over and absorb regions like these.

Well, they see now—to some extent—where the cause of their failure lies: but even with the overwhelming disasters to which they have been subjected, they are not cured. There are men even now, down there, whose business it is, and has been, to direct public opinion, who attempt to discourage immigration; who seem—after the old fashion—those agencies which have been seen effective in building up mighty States. They do not want people amongst them with new and startling ideas or methods of getting onward; they still prefer to be "let alone." Chronic in their dislikes, determined that they will not be moved further from their old paths than they can possibly help, they resist every endeavor to inaugurate a different condition of things, and the bulk of them will, it seems, cling to their antiquated errors, die by them rather than yield. Let us ask whether Maryland is to follow their lead?

It is cheering to observe amidst the prevalence of opinions to which we have thus called attention, that there are yet sources of light in the South, progressive ideas from which everything is to be hoped. With that section opened to the free! discussion, it will not be long before old fogyism on every subject will be driven to the wall, and with a new population wending its way thither, there must be rapid changes such as will soon set them on the road to a better destiny. As in the case of Maryland, all enlightened men down there base their hopes and expectations of advancement for States always deficient in labor and enterprise, on the free labor now pouring upon our shores from the old world; and when the old States and the new alike invite this, let none here be unwise enough to attempt to thrust it back, to discourage it, unless the State is to stand still or be remanded to its old rate of progress. Speaking of the Swedish immigration now a feature in that movement from the old world, a late number of the New York Iron Age, an excellent and able journal, the organ of the iron trade of the country, says:

"A large number of these people are now arriving every week, and the prospect is that before the end of the season several thousands will come. They are a thrifty, simple, industrious people, almost entirely protestant in faith, and have invariably proved to be good citizens and thriving settlers. Many of them come out for the purpose of purchasing and settling upon their own lands; but a large number desire employment as miners, farm laborers and mechanics."

Now we insist on the need of welcoming these people and all who are willing to come amongst us to work. When we think of a State of the territorial extent of Maryland, and yet so deficient in rural population, in thriving villages and towns and manufactories, in mining undertakings and so on, that nearly one half of its whole population is comprised within the bounds of a single city, cannot the most limited in discernment see that every immigrant to the State should be welcomed hither with eagerness, if the State is ever to achieve a fitting destiny?

WHO ARE ENTITLED TO VOTE IN VIRGINIA.

Thomas R. Bowden, Attorney General of Virginia, gives it as his opinion that there are two classes of voters, and their votes should be received by the Commissioners:

1st—All persons in other respects qualified, (i. e.,) white citizens over the age of twenty one, and resident in the county or town in which they offer to vote six months preceding the election, unless they have held offices, civil or diplomatic, under the so called Confederate Government, or otherwise embraced in the first twelve exceptions and the fourteenth exception to President Johnson's Amnesty Proclamation.

2d.—Persons who have held civil office under the so called Confederate Government, or who are otherwise embraced in the said exceptions to President Johnson's Amnesty Proclamation, may, nevertheless, vote, if they have been specially pardoned by the President.

☞ A tothe plesiosaurus has been discovered in Dorsetshire, England. This fossil, though not so perfect as the magnificent one acquired by the British Museum last year, is yet a remarkably fine specimen, and being in stone, is in good preservation. HOMŒPATHIC MEDICINES.

HUMPHREY'S HOMŒPATHIC SPECIFICS had their origin in a great public want—medicines for all the needs of life. Curatives that father, mother, nurse or traveler, could always have by them, and always rely upon—so simple that mistake can not be made in the selection—so harmless that all may use them with impunity—and so efficient that all may rely upon them with safety. Such they have proved. Thousands of families use them daily for all the ills and ailments of every day life, and rarely are seriously sick, or have need to call a physician.

Thousands, with some single specifics have cured themselves of serious chronic diseases of years standing, and upon which they have spent hundreds in vain, and among the million who use them, none question their purity or efficacy.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS.

The combination of ingredients in these Pills is the result of a long and extensive practice. They are mild in their operation, and cannot do harm with the most delicate. They are in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions, whether from cold or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections, hysterics, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs, &c., disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS

was the commencement of a new era in the treatment of irregularities and obstructions which have consigned so many to a premature grave.
