THE SOUTHERN LEADERS NOT YET CURED OF THEIR FOLLIES.

Every indication from Washington, of late, proves pretty conclusively that President Johnson is tightening the reins somewhat in regard to the policy to be exhibited towards disloyal individuals and communities; that having discovered a disposition to take advantage of his leniency and to cultivate a rebellious and disorganizing spirit, he intends to give them only so much scope as may be deemed entirely prudent in the end. In this he will be sustained by the truly loyal of all shades of party. If those who have been engaged in the most culpable attempts to destroy the Union will not be convinced by moderate means of their obligations to the Government; if they continue to plot against it and endeavor to bring it into disrepute, in this way showing themselves unworthy of the kindness and consideration the President would extend to them, why the only method to pursue with such is to convince them by the shortest and most effective process that the power which has put down their armed organizations, is still competent to deal with whatever emergencies may arise, and that the disaffected will not be further trusted until they show themselves worthy of trust.

And if the rebel leaders showed themselves to be short sighted, and indeed mad, in bringing on the revolt; if they were unwise in causing that section to bankrupt and almost depopulate itself in a fruitless attempt to destroy the Union, their folly is intensified now that their weakness is demonstrated, when they are found doing what they can in standing in the way of reorganization, in still further provoking measures which must have the effect of postponing their recovery from the troubles they have brought upon themselves. The Government—let it be noted—has done everything possible to aid them in recovering from their disabilities. Indeed, its action towards them has been generous in the extreme. All over the South it has been distributing rations, controlling their own lawless "guerillas," rebuilding their railroads and running them on Government account; restoring postal facilities at immense cost, and with no prospect of remuneration for a long time to come; and yet all this time certain of the disaffected down there have been snapping at the hand that extended to them these benefits, adding a new chapter to their record of ingratitude and wrong doing, and to the amazement of all Loyal minds.

Now, we say, without hesitation,—that much as we desire to see fraternal relations again subsisting betwixt those lately in arms against each other, that until these people show some penitence, some appreciation of the kindness sought to be extended toward them, that we hope and trust that the Government will bear down heavily upon them until they do. If they will not elect loyal men to public stations; if they will still persist in thrusting to the front great traitors, notorious assailants and enemies of the Government, we hope the Government will give them nothing but military rule until they show themselves fitted and thoroughly worthy of something else, no matter how long the period may be, whether one year or twenty. Their folly and madness seems incredible; and it is indeed comforting to know that in the new Executive they have one to deal with, who can neither be bullied or deceived. He has shown himself entirely willing to give them every desirable chance; to overlook as far as he can their follies and crimes: yet it is plain that his patience is fast becoming exhausted, and that let them go on a little longer in the same course, and he will be disposed to show them little favor.

The truth is the prospects of the South for the future are not, under the circumstances, pleasant to contemplate; because it is but too evident that the masses down there confide still in the men who have in the past deceived them to their hurt.—And as the mortified and beaten leaders must have their revenge, in some sort, if they can get it; and as from their long practice in the arts of the demagogue they are likely still to keep in the lead, it must be a long time before the majority find out that the very worst thing for themselves and their section, is to put men in position who have not, and cannot get the confidence of the Government. This is a vital point. The Government is at last the only power that can aid them in the restoration of their fallen fortunes; and just so long—we repeat—as they show themselves hostile to it, indisposed to co operate with it in the complete restoration of the Union, just so long will they be commended to their present disabilities, and have their prosperity postponed.

Meanwhile, except to prevent them from doing mischief to those under the special protection of the Government as its supporters, they will be left, mainly, to work out their own destinies their own way. A firm rule will be maintained, and they will be carefully watched; but as for giving them scope for further conspiracies against the peace of the country, let them writhe and cry out against "oppression" as they may, it will make little or no difference. The loyal of the land may indeed regret their unhappy vindictiveness, their suicidal course; but they cannot aid them,—that must come from themselves. On "probation," privileged to demonstrate whether they are cured of their follies, and to be received back to favor just so far as they show themselves convicted in their own minds of having gone astray, a generation may pass before the last lingering heresy is discarded and they show themselves worthy of being citizens of a great and beneficent republic. Not until they cease to boast of their rebellious exploits, cease to vaunt the part they have played in the most nefarious deeds that ever sullied the annals of the human race, need they expect the defenders of the Government to overlook their follies and crimes; but showing true penitence, the door is wide open for reconciliation. Until that hour comes, harangues about the duty of "conciliating" such, are quite out of place; are the veriest folly; for no one wants tenders to conciliation met with insults; none, having any self respect, whether government or people, will permit kindness tendered to be thrown back in scorn and derision.

We are indebted to Mr. B. Merchant, of the Reid Express Company, for late Southern papers, for which he will please accept our thanks.

THE LONDON TIMES ON SHERMAN'S MODESTY, BOLDNESS AND SAGACITY.—Whatever may have been the character of General Sherman's audience at St. Louis, there is no mistaking the modesty with which he told them the story of the campaign of the Mississippi; nor can any one fail to appreciate the feeling which prompted him to stop at a point where the narrative must have become a mere history of his own successes. It is no easy trial to a victorious general to stand before an audience already excited in his favor. He must neither be cold nor vainglorious. The first would be a rebuke to his hearers, the second an injury to himself. Gen. Sherman deserves the greater credit for having passed through the ordeal with success. He took up the narrative of the war at a time when he was almost unknown, and he dropped it before he became the single object of attention and speculation.

There is a homely plainness about the speech of General Sherman, at St. Louis, which will, perhaps, be regarded in this country as its most admirable characteristic. The successful soldier addresses the nation of the world most given to rhetorical oratory in words blunt and rude as ever Othello could have used. Of himself he says little, and he never speaks of his superiors or colleagues except by way of praise. It is thus that he disarms all criticism on the occasion of his speech. At the first blush nothing can be more opposed to our notions than that a General should be called upon to address a mixed audience upon the campaign in which he took a leading part. Once, indeed, an Admiral announced the victories he was going to achieve, but he was excused because he came from a demonstrative race, and his exploits, possibly from no fault of his, bore but a slight proportion to his promises. We are accustomed, however, to look with more favor upon the older Admiral, whose despatch to the Admiralty was confined to the sentence: "I have destroyed all the Spanish vessels in this coast, their names and rating as per margin." General Sherman's speech was longer, but it was plain and direct, and it must be said of him that he was as modest as victory as he was bold and sagacious in battle.

THE GRAVE OF "LEATHERSTOCKING."—The Troy Times has the following:—In the Baptist churchyard at Hoosick Falls may be seen a tombstone which marks the grave of Nat. Shipman, the original of Fenimore Cooper's "Deerslayer," in the well known novel of that name, and of "Hawkeye," in "The Last of the Mohicans." These are documents to show beyond any doubt the authenticity of this grave; and there is a monument on Lot among the residents of Hoosick Falls to erect an monument worthy of a character immortalized in the romance of the northern wilderness. Until recently a sandstone law of the "Deerslayer," named Ryan, lived in Hoosick Falls.

IT LOOKS LIKE CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect disease! lungs until consumption sets in and you are pronounced incurable. Always attend to a cough as at once. "A stitch in time saves nine" is an adage quite as applicable to bodily ailments as to business transactions. Remember that your life is in danger, however insignificant may seem to be the malady in its first approaches; and, as it is "the best life you have got, and you may never get a better," (to use John Wesley's quaint language) take care of it. The use of Radway's Ready Relief, in the incipient stages of consumption will always avert the grip of that fatal affliction. We have personally known cases of diseased lungs, which looked just like consumption, and which had many of the symptoms accompanying it of confirmed consumption, that gave way immediately to Radway's Ready Relief, taken as a stimulant, in hot sweetened water, on going to bed at night. The perspiration occasioned by it was copious and extremely offensive, but it carried off all the dangerous appearances, and as a natural result of the persistent use of the Ready Relief every other night, for three or four weeks, the diseased lungs became well. The raising of blood ceased. The cough gradually disappeared. The pain in the chest departed. The dark, thin venous blood from the heart once more properly oxygenated in the lungs, returned a bright red, and full of vitality to arterial circulation, and the Ready Relief is certain to effect such a wholesome change in its application to be perceived in. N. B. That we submit it to be a remedy for any decided case of consumption. We cannot conscientiously aver that. But we do say, we utter it with confidence, that it has cured, and that it will cure many cases which look like consumption, and may be called consumption in its incipient state. That may be depended upon. The Ready Relief is sold by druggists.

N. B.—In addition to the evidence of the importance of Radway's Ready Relief, in the treatment of weak lungs, colds, and pneumatory symptoms of consumption, we present the following letter from a well known citizen of Memphis.

"MEMPHIS, Macoma Co., Mich., September 4, 1864.

"Dr. Radway—Dear Sir—About four years since I was very much troubled with DISEASED LUNGS. My friends thought I had the Consumption. I was entirely unfit for business, raised blood, and had every symptom of the above fatal disease. One night, on going to bed, I thought I would take a wine glass full of your READY RELIEF (in hot water) as a stimulant to sweat me. It did so. The perspiration was of a slimy substance, and offensive smell. I followed taking the Ready Relief every other night for four weeks, and at the end of that time was entirely well. This is a true statement of facts, which I will testify to under oath.

"Yours, &c., "JAMES SAGE,
"Sage's Hotel,
"Memphis, Michigan."

SPECIAL NOTICES.

WE THE UNDERSIGNED, REGISTERS OF THE TENTH WARD, see with regret a restoration of the falsehood in regard to the registering of Thomas D. Bedford, police-officer. We are satisfied with the decision of Judge Bond, (and always entertained the same opinion before he gave his.) When Bedford came to be registered he was asked, where he was born? He replied in England. We asked him for his papers. He said that he had none, but was naturalized by his father's papers. We admitted the fact, but required the proof, and told him to go to the Clerk of the Superior Court and get a certificate to that effect (as the law required the Registers not to allow the name of any foreign born citizen or resident to be entered in the eighth column or register of qualified voters, unless this naturalization papers be produced and exhibited to the Inspector, and by them endorsed with the date of their exhibition, see register law, chapter 174, section 5), and we would register him; but, John Bull like, he flew in a passion, and said that he would not, that he had voted five times already, and by getting his papers it would cost him six (6) dollars, and that would be one (1) dollar per vote, and he be d——d if he would do it; he appeared yesterday, the 23d instant, and there being charges of disloyalty against him, his case was deferred until next week for a hearing.
