THE GATHERING OF STRANGERS IN THE CITY.

The gathering of Odd Fellows here at this time is exceedingly gratifying when we find communities so lately at variance, largely represented in the delegations which throng our streets. Fraternizing with an earnestness which seems to make the differences of the past only more to be lamented, we hope that our citizens of every shade of sentiment will do all that is possible to emphasize their welcome; to convince them that we are henceforward to be indeed but one people.

We are glad to learn that the programme for the ceremonials of to-day, is in the highest degree attractive and creditable to the occasion. No one can look upon the faces of those who are here as representatives of their Order, and not feel that a body of men so intelligent and so capable of comprehending their mission, are able to do a vast deal in restoring old relationships, in again cementing States and communities in the bonds of good fellowship. We hope and trust that all that can be accomplished to render their brief stay here pleasant will be done; and that they may carry back to their homes pleasing remembrances of their sojourn in the Monumental City.

TRIPOLETT'S ALLEY.—We trust that the praiseworthy movement now on foot to abate this central and prominent nuisance will be effective, and that what has been a disgrace to the very heart of the city for a half century or more, will finally be eradicated. Lead a blind man along Baltimore street any warm day, and his olfactories would tell him instanter when he reached this abominable locality; and now when everything combines to make the needed improvement one of the easiest possible, we trust the opportunity will not be allowed to pass, but that the alley will be widened to a fine street, and thus made a convenience instead of a nuisance. The burning, recently, of a portion of the property that stands in the way of the needed improvement would seem to have cleared the way to the demolition of that remaining; and the fact that so very few property holders are maintaining the old condition of things should stimulate the whole neighborhood—and indeed the whole city—to the improvement designated.
