RECTIFYING THE MISTAKES OF THE PAST.

The energy and determination with which the great body of the Southern people have fallen to work to correct the mistakes of the past, and to provide for a better future, are something pleasant and encouraging to contemplate. Even South Carolina, the main originator of the evils which were inaugurated in inaugurating the war, shows herself, by the recent action of her Constitutional Convention, ready to accept the extremest lessons it has brought, and leads off by remodeling those laws which were in her past history so fatal to all progress, making herself indeed a State worthy of the best hopes and expectations of all who revere equal rights. The action so promptly taken in this case, is the best proof that could be given, that the policy of President Johnson in trusting these communities as far as possible, is as wise as it is generous. If the war has taught the latter anything, it has shown them that the secret of progress on this continent is the acquisition of an industrious and enterprising population, and the accordance to such of every right and privilege needful to make the citizen identified with and proud of the State. And when South Carolina is found hastening to set herself right in this regard, by removing those obstacles which barred the masses from direct participation in the government over them, every other State lately in arms may well emulate her example, and propose to welcome to their borders all who show themselves indeed worthy of citizenship.

But the action of the South Carolina Constitutional Convention in "equalizing representation" and so on, is but one indication of the many now coming up from the South, to show that they purpose throwing down every barrier which, in the past, looked to exclusiveness and class legislation. From all quarters down there are sent forth invitations for immigration, manifestations of a fixed determination to appropriate as far as it is practicable those industrial accomplishments, which, building up manufactories and workshops, increase population and wealth. Old ideas are exploded; and when we find amongst the names of those now legislating for better things in South Carolina, such significant ones as those of Inglis and Pickens, we are made to feel that the reverses suffered have indeed revolutionized opinions, and left matters on what at last promises to be a firm basis.

But looking at causes and results in all their manifold bearings, there are some singular phases to be observed. It is found that those communities that in the outset were the furthest wrong, are now amongst the most anxious and determined to get right. Whilst South Carolina and Georgia, for instance, are working energetically and in good faith to adapt themselves to the new condition of affairs, Kentucky,—only half wrong, at first—comes up but slowly, and is torn and distracted to a sad degree by the conflict of old opinions with new.

The truth is—the nation, the men who have fought the great battle to preserve the Government, must be patient with all. As matters stand, it is a marvel of human progress, that ideas so deeply engrafted, held to for so long a period with fierce determination, should be surrendered at all. And that the errors should be confessed, and that regret for the sad mistakes made are candidly acknowledged, should, as a general thing, satisfy the most implacable, and pave the way to a reconciliation as complete as it will be desirable.

We hail the signs, then, of late manifested in South Carolina, with the sincerest satisfaction. They are good omens. They promise a blessed future, and should be responded to with the kindliest good feeling by communities lately at variance. We want a restoration of the Union, in truth and in fact. We desire no mere nominal peace, one enforced for years by the bayonet, but one in which there shall be that fraternity, that desire for cordial intercourse, whose true and blessed fruits shall be individual happiness and State and national greatness.—In this work, every good citizen can do something. Forgetting as far as possible lines of division, political feuds, forgetting that there is such a distinction as "North" or "South" in the vocabulary of statesmanship, let all welcome hither those lately in arms from either section, making Maryland that place for "burying the hatchet" her geographical position permits her to assume. The meeting here of a great benevolent association of late, is an earnest that men regard her as capable of exercising right feelings toward all. She has vindicated her patriotism, her devotion to the Union; she is ready now to aid that fraternization which is to launch the Republic on a new career of greatness such as the world never before witnessed.

THE WILDEY MONUMENT.—We are indebted to Messrs. Fisher & Brothers, of 95 West Baltimore street, for a large and most beautiful copy of the Wildey Monument, taken with the vast multitude in attendance at the dedication day before yesterday. It is one of the most effective pictures of the kind we remember to have seen; the splendid perspective of the city being given with a fineness of finish which makes it really grand, reminding one of the details of some of Martin's scripture pieces. We commend it to the attention of all who want a fine memento of the occasion.

☞ We are again indebted to Mr. T. P. Wilkinson, of the Reid Express, for files of Southern papers.

OPEN REVOLT.—An Arkansas planter lately sent a note to a local superintendent of freedmen by one of his slaves, taking as follows the bold position that slavery still exists:

"The bearer of this circular I consider my property, having seen no enactment of the Federal Congress or of our State government authorizing any one to demand him of me. When I am perfectly satisfied that the slaves are emancipated by such authority as is regarded as constitutional by our higher court of law and equity, then, and not until then, will I make any contract with a slave, nor regard them in any other light than the property of those who have purchased or raised them; and I am therefore the owner of the boy who bears this note."

How many planters are ready to follow this bold lead does not appear.

☞ The amount of Jeff. Davis' treasure, ascertained at the Treasury Department in Washington, was as follows: $57,000 in gold coin, $9,000 in silver coin, mostly Mexican dollars, old coinage, and thirty bars of silver; total value slightly over $100,000.

HOMŒPATHIC MEDICINES.

HUMPHREY'S HOMŒPATHIC SPECIFICS had their origin in a great public want—medicines for all the needs of life. Countless that father, mother, nurse or traveler, could always have by them, and always rely upon—so simple that mistake can not be made in the selection—so harmless that all may use them with impunity—and so efficient that all may rely upon them with safety. Such they have proved. Thousands of families use them daily for all the ills and sicknesses of every day life, and nearly are seriously sick, or have need to call a physician.

Thousands, with same single specifics have cured themselves of serious chronic diseases of years standing, and upon which they have spent hundreds in vain, and among the million who use them, none question their purity or efficacy.
