To give a proper idea of the plan of this work, the following is extracted from the advertisement of the Author:

"I imagine a Scythian, named Anacharsis, to arrive in Greece, some years before the birth of Alexander; and that from Athens, the usual place of his residence, he makes several excursions into the neighbouring provinces; every where observing the manners and customs of the inhabitants, being present at their festivals, and studying the nature of their governments; sometimes dedicating his leisure to inquiries relative to the progress of the human mind, and sometimes conversing with the great men who flourished at that time; with Epaminondas, Phocion, Xenophon, Plato, Aristotle, Demosthenes, &c. As soon as he has seen Greece enslaved by Philip, the father of Alexander, he returns into Scythia, where he puts in order an account of his travels; and, to prevent any interruption in his narrative, relates in an introduction, the memorable events which had passed in Greece before he left Scythia." — "I have chosen to write a narrative of travels rather than a history, because in such a narrative all is scenery, and action; and because circumstantial details, may be entered into which are not permitted to the historian."
