

norface; but it will be a great aggravation of our guilt.

It seems as if our officers of police think to avert calamity by keeping the streets and gutters clean; doth public calamity proceed from the filthiness of our gutters, or from the abominable evils and filthiness of our practices? How different were the ideas of the rulers of a great city in the Gentile world, when threatened with immediate judgment? Their proclamation to the people was, "Let them turn every one of them from their evil ways, and from the violence that is in their hands. Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?" It is not in a nuisance to our smell that the danger lies, but in placing a nuisance before God, who hath an absolute control over all the powers and operations in nature. When oppression, cruelty and injustice, grow into dominion, so that it is hardly safe for any one to intercede for the oppressed, every species of vice is encouraged thereby, and the end for which mankind were created is totally perverted: it is then consistent with the justice of God to withdraw his protection from them; and we be unto that place, or unto that city, from whom he withdraweth his protection. It is with astonishment I behold every one in the pursuit of wealth or amusements, as if in a state of perfect security, while the cries of the oppressed captives are piercing the Heavens day by day. With the earth trembling under our feet, and with judgments impending over our heads, how can we be at rest, and forget that God hath declared that he will be a refuge for the oppressed, but hath never declared himself in favour of the oppressor?
