A PROCLAMATION.

GIVEN in council at the city of Annapolis, under the seal of the state of Maryland, this sixth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and six.

By his excellency's command,

TO THE FLYING-FISH.

BY MOORE.

WHEN I have seen thy snowy wing
O'er the blue wave at evening spring,
And give those scales, of silver white,
So gaily to the eye of light,
As if thy frame were formed to rise,
And live amid the glorious skies;
Oh! it has made me proudly feel,
How like thy wings impatient zeal
Is the pure soul, that scorns to rest
Upon the world's ignoble breast,
But takes the plume that God has given,
And rises into light and heaven!
But when I see that wing, so bright,
Grow languid with a moment's flight,
Attempt the paths of air, in vain,
And sink into the waves again;
Alas! the flattering pride is o'er,
Like thee, a while, the soul may soar,
But erring man must blush to think,
Like thee, again the soul must sink!
Oh Virtue! when thy clime I seek,
Let not my spirit's flight be weak:
Let me not, like this feeble thing,
With brine still dropping from its wing,
Just sparkle in the solar glow,
And plunge again to depths below;
But, when I leave the grosser throng,
With whom my soul hath dwelt so long,
Let me, in that aspiring day,
Cast every lingering stain away,
And, panting for thy purer air,
Fly up at once and fix me there!

From the Port Folio.

Among a thousand good songs, I do not know whether I could select one of sweeter cadence, sounder sense, and more agreeable allegory than the ensuing. It is the production of George Saville Carey.

LIFE'S like a ship, in constant motion,
Sometimes high and sometimes low,
Where every one must brave the ocean,
Whatsoever wind may blow.
If, unassail'd by squall or shower,
Wafted by the gentle gales:
Let's not lose the favouring hour,
While success attends our sails.

Or, if the wayward winds should bluster,
Let us not give way to fear,
But let us all our patience muster,
And learn from Reason how to steer.
Let Judgment keep you ever steady,
'Tis a ballast never fails;
Should dangers rise, be ever ready
To manage well the swelling sails.

Trust not too much your own opinion,
While your vessel's under weigh,
Let good example bear dominion,
That's a compass will not stray;
When thundering tempests make you shudder,
Or Boreas on the surface rails,
Let good discretion guide the rudder,
And PROVIDENCE attend the sails.

Then, when you're safe from danger, riding
In some welcome port or bay,
Hope be the anchor you confide in,
And care, awhile, in slumber lay.

Or, when each can's with liquor flowing,
And good fellowship prevails,
Let each true heart, with rapture glowing,
Drink success unto our fails.

AN OLD PROVERB.

A SAUCY wit attack'd a married Wight,
For quizzing was his general plan;
Fir'd at the attack, his rustling hen,
Rose, and began to peck again;
Just to support her own dear man:
"Why, Mr. Wit, you're strangely out,
Your jokes may take another route,
—My husband all submission scorns;
You take a bull—I assure you by the horns."
"Madam," replied the humorist, "I yield—
I knew not you had given him such a shield."

EPIGRAMS:

On a Young Lady with a Bosom-friend of Siberian ermine.

TO check the blast, to guard thy tender form
From ruthless cold this gentle shield I send,
May heaven afford thee, in each ruder storm,
The warm protection of a bosom friend.

To a Lady, who turned her cheek to the author, when he went to kiss her.

IST for a grace, or is't for some dislike,
That, when I'd kiss your lips, you turn your cheek?
Some think this vastly rude in your behaviour,
But I should rather think it as a favour,
For I, to show my kindness and my love,
Would leave both lip and cheek to kiss your glove,
And with the ease to make you full acquainted,
Your glove's perfum'd, your lips and cheeks are painted.
