RICHARD DAW,

WHEELWRIGHT,

RESPECTFULLY informs his friends and customers, that he still continues to carry on his trade, being supplied with good materials; he returns his thanks to his former customers for past favours, and hopes a continuance of the same; he has declined having any thing to do with the blacksmith's work, but those who honour him with the work at his business, he flatters himself in giving satisfaction, and as he keeps no books, he expects those that employ him to pay him for his work when finished. 2

WILLIAM COE,

TAILOR,

RESPECTFULLY begs leave to inform his friends and customers, and the public generally, that he has removed his shop to the house next door above Messrs. Ridgely, Weems, and Co. store, in Church-street, and directly opposite to Gwinn's tavern, where, with a set of good hands, he is prepared to execute business in his line, in the first style of fashion, with fidelity and promptitude.

Grateful for past favours, he is determined to exert his utmost powers to merit a continuance of the same.

N. B. Orders from the country will be thankfully received, and executed with fidelity and dispatch.

CATHARINE OGHEE.

WHERE weeps the willow o'er the stream,
Thy silver stream, O Lucan!
And sighs, as autumn's evening breeze
Blows cold upon thy bosom;
Beneath thy verdant bank, inlaid
With wild flowers' sweetest nosegay;
The sweetest flower of all the vale,
There sleeps my Catharine Oghee.

How oft, alas! at evening star,
We marked thy clear face dimple;
How oft, beneath the moon's bright beam,
We marked thy waters wimple!
And whilst her bosom's dazzling snow
My glowing cheeks did pillow,
Ah! what could match my joys beneath
The hoar-leaf weeping willow!

I drank the music of her tongue,
Inhaled her balmy kisses;
I hung around her ivory neck,
Dissolved in chastest blisses;
But, woe is me! that beam of love,
The valley's sweetest nosegay,
Now sleeps beneath thy primrose bank;
My angel, Catharine Oghee.

Accursed the fiend, whose ruffian hand
Did tear that beauteous blossom,
Remorse with scorpion stings corrode,
And canker in his bosom;
For me remains the mournful joy
With wild flowers' sweetest nosegay,
When twilight comes, to deck the grave
Where sleeps my Catharine Oghee.

And when young spring the sprouting lawn
Shall star with amber showers,
I'll seek the spot at early dawn,
And plant the sweetest flowers.
And when they hang their pensive heads
Beneath the sultry sun's rays,
My tears shall make them bloom again
Their sweets round Catharine Oghee.

GARDENS.

PLOUGHING Gardens late in the fall, during the winter, or early in the spring, has a beneficial tendency in destroying worms, and causing the eggs of various insects, lodged in the ground to freeze. Many farmers believe they have experienced great benefit from this management.

Noah Webster, Esq. whose "useful labours" are equal to his indefatigable pursuit of literature, recommends that the loose bark on fruit trees be carefully scraped off in the fall: this destroyeth the eggs of many insects, deposited for shelter during the winter; and, at the same time, "nothing is better for a fruit tree than to keep the bark smooth, clean and healthy."

Agriculture hail!
The first; the last; my eager muse shall sing.
And see where bursting through the gloom of night,
The solar rays with steady step advance.
Hark! their approach the feathered choir announce
In sweetest notes. The varied melody
Herds, flocks increase.
* * * * * * *
Farmer, awake!
Swift let the plough divide the glebe, and tame
The genius of the soil. On thee depends
A family's support. Thy partner
Stands smiling at the door; around her throng
Her ruddy offspring; one she holds aloft;
To thee directs his eyes.
Oft as the citizen,
Envelop'd long in the town's mirky fog,
And breathing air corrupted, sallies forth
To view the beauties of the hill and dale,
The vocal forest and the teeming glebe—
Unusual transports on the senses rush;
Trade's anxious care he for a while detests—
Around the stranger flocks the infant tribe:
And whilst the glittering buckle charms their sight,
The shining vest, and gold encircled hat—
With equal wonder he beholds their cheeks
Glowing in all the luxury of health.

A Quizzical Fellow.

DOCTOR MORSE, of Elizabeth-town, had several winter mornings discovered that much of his wood had disappeared during the night. He therefore set up one night to watch, to detect the marauder: about midnight he saw one of his neighbours come to his pile, shoulder a large log, and bear it off. The doctor immediately gathered his arms full of wood, and lightly followed him at a distance. The neighbour arrived at his own door and threw down his log—when the doctor also threw his load on the top of it, exclaiming—"There, d—n you, there's some small wood to burn with your log."
