MARYLAND

[LXVIIIth YEAR.]

MARYLAND GAZETTE.

ANNAPOLIS, THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1812.

THE UNANIMOUS ADDRESS Of all the Federalists who met at the late Session of the Legislature, TO THEIR CONSTITUENTS.

At a period like the present, when the tempest of war overwhelms our beloved country, and she is menaced with the scourge of humanity, which has so long desolated continental Europe; the undersigned members of the minority in the House of Delegates are impelled, by a sense of duty to their constituents and in justification of their own political conduct, to claim your serious attention to a review of the causes of the impending evils.

Aware of the gravity and importance of the task, which we have assumed, it has not been undertaken without mature deliberation. For many years a course of measures has been pursued by those who have been entrusted with the management of public affairs, which has gradually impaired our national prosperity. The most prominent of its baleful consequences have been the annihilation of commerce, a diminution of revenue, and an increasing expenditure, distress, suspicion and alarm at home; contempt, insult and aggressions abroad.

Before we enter upon a detail, which will evince the truth of this representation, in justice to the motives by which we are actuated, and the principles which have ever directed our conduct, we deem it to be guarded against the unjust imputation of those, who will endeavour to persuade you, that our object is to create an unwarrantable opposition to the national administration. No, fellow citizens: ours is the only republic upon earth. Rational liberty, an exile from the Old World, has found a temple in the New World. Ours is a government emanating from the people. They have delegated a portion of their power to agents, who are bound to provide for the common defence, to promote the general welfare, and to secure the blessings of freedom to their constituents. If they should fail to perform this interesting duty, to discharge the high obligation, the people have reserved to themselves a constitutional corrective. Their unworthy servants will be dismissed, and their authority will be conided to more faithful and more competent agents. We will not trespass upon your patience by a reference to documents, already published to the world, which blazon our shame, and give energy to despair.

It is known to you fellow citizens, that by the blessing of Divine Providence, the wisdom of the sages, and the valour of the heroes of the revolution, secured to us the blessings of independence, and we found ourselves at the end of that glorious struggle free to establish a government of our choice, to perpetuate those blessings to posterity. "By the peaceable working of events" a constitution was framed and adopted: the U. S. assumed the imposing and interesting attitude of a young but powerful nation, rapidly approximating to greatness, under the banners of Freedom. And here permit us to remind you, that our first steps in the prosperous march to national aggrandizement were guided by the prudence and firmness of that glorious chief, who had been our sword and bulwark in the day of battle. The government was scarcely organized under the new constitution, when the French revolution commenced. Need we recount the momentous consequences, which have characterized its progress, and termination, & its influence upon the policy of our own country. The task is unnecessary as it would be painful. If we can demonstrate to your satisfaction, that the management of our public affairs has been injudicious and impolitic; that no time should be lost in arresting the career of men who obstinately persevere in a system so pernicious in its consequences; you will not hesitate a moment to apply this constitutional corrective. For this purpose only, we have resolved upon this appeal to the good sense, the spirit, and the interests of the yeomanry of Maryland. We shall endeavour to make it plain, intelligible and dispassionate, with a firm reliance that our motives will be duly appreciated: that our efforts will avail to rouse you to a jealous vigilance of the measures of government. Should our flattering expectations be realized, we shall hail, with exultation, the day when our country was rescued from the jaws of destruction.

We proceed to the painful retrospect which our duty has enjoined. The limits of this address forbid a particular enumeration of every incident and every measure, which have combined to involve us in the toils of our enemies. It is sufficient to remark, that it gave birth to those insults and aggressions, which have so long harassed the commerce, and endangered the peace of the U. States—and here you will turn with pleasing but mournful recollection to the policy which distinguished the administration of Washington.

Although embarrassed by an Indian war; by the vast debt incurred during the revolutionary contest; by the imperfect development of the resources of our country, by the uncertainty of the efficacy of our system of revenue, and other difficulties, arising from the recent organization of the government, he was not deterred from the adoption of the most energetic measures to vindicate the honour, and protect the commerce of the nation. The most impartial neutrality we observed, but our rights as a neutral nation were maintained; when violated, negotiation was resorted to, but negotiation was accompanied by preparation to enforce her demands, the event justified what the experience of ages has confirmed—that to assume a respectable posture of defence is the best security for the enjoyment of the blessings of peace; a favorite maxim of our feelings, we will not dwell upon a theme so honourable to the American character; memory faithfully retains the
