IMPORTANT.

By the Brig Brutus, Moore, from Cadix we learn that Marshal Soult had arrived on the opposite side, with a reinforcement of 12,000 men—that a constant bombardment was kept up by the French, who had thrown five hundred shells a day into Cadiz, which had done some damage, and placed the shipping in the harbor in considerable danger. The ship Maria-Peen, Capt. Porter, informed that in lat. 48, long. 40, he passed through the British homeward bound fleet of 10 sail.

Very late and very important intelligence from London.

Yesterday afternoon, the Pilot-Boat Thoro returned at this port from a cruise of six days off the Coast.

In the Sound the Thorne fell in with a bearded brig Felix, capt. Cornwall, 32 days from Galway, for this port, and detained from capt. C. a London paper, (The Star) of the evening of the 17th June, which the Editors of the Mercantile Advertiser were politely favored with, and from which we have made the following important extracts, relative to the REPEAL OF THE ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

LONDON, JUNE 17.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.
ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

Mr. Brougham moved that a humble address be presented to his Royal Highness Prince Regent, stating that the House inquired into the distressed state of the manufactures of the country, that the result of their inquiry had induced them to believe that it was chiefly owing to the Orders in Council of 1807 and 1809, that at the time that they assure his Royal Highness of their desire that the maritime rights of the country should be maintained unimpaired, recommended the revocation of those orders as injurious to the country, and an unjust infringement of the rights of neutral powers.

Mr. Brougham made a long speech in support of his motion. Mr. Rolle in opposition and Mr. Baring in favor.

Lord Castlereagh [one of the ministers] the conclusion of his speech, said,

If the plan he proposed should take place, and the mutual intercourse be restored, would have the effect of introducing connections, which could not fail to have most prosperous and beneficial results. As events, he hoped the house would not interpose its judgment between the Government and the American Government. He confessed nothing had been discovered in the conduct of the Executive Government of a country that showed hostility to America, and he confidently hoped the present negotiations would be so managed as to pay attention to all differences subsisting between the countries. The vote he would propose the House would be, to pass to the orders of the day. (An universal cry of hear, hear, from the opposition side of the House, confessed he did not understand that cheer. If the documents which were necessary been before the House, he should have the motion with a direct negative; as it was not so, should be the motion with a direct conclusion.

Mr. Whitbread said, the noble Lord had led to with the House to believe that he proposed to do something conciliatory to America. But did he mean to act immediately on the position? or was it his intention to send America, and tell her, that if she would in her late system of the Non-Interference, this country would suspend, or revoke, or do what, with the Orders in Council? Did he mean to give any relief to the starving manufacturers and ruined merchants, or did he mean to advise his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, to withdraw his orders in Council, till this question should be determined?

Lord Castlereagh, in explanation, meant as he had stated, that a proposition should be made to the American Government to suspend immediately the Orders in Council, on condition they should they suspend their Non-Intercourse Act: in the interval both parties should endeavor to prevail on Buonaparte to the rules of commerce to their ancient temporary limits.

Mr. Ponsonby said, he saw no reason why such proposition as that mentioned by Lord Castlereagh. The American Minister distinctly and plainly stated to our ministers, that as soon as the Orders in Council were rescinded, that instant the Non-Intercourse Act would cease. The Noble
