From the Providence American. LATEST FROM GIBRALTAR.

Arrived here last evening, brig Brillant, Snow, in 42 days passage from Gibraltar. We were particularly favoured with the following interesting intelligence, by an intelligent gentleman, passenger in the brig.

The American squadron fell in with the Algerine frigate Messoda, 46 guns, and from 4 to 600 men. She was engaged by the Guerriere alone, and after a fight of one hour and an half she was captured by her; the Messoda was killed and 24 wounded; the Guerriere had 7 wounded. They afterwards captured another frigate, a corvette off Cape Palos; the particulars of the action not stated. The prizes were sent into Cartagena, but were ordered by the Spanish government to leave that port; in consequence of which they proceeded to Toulon. It was reported that another Algerine frigate, a brig, had been spoken going to Toulon, a prize to the American squadron. It was confidently believed at Gibraltar, that the greater part, if not the whole of the Algerine fleet, would be captured, as there were certain accounts of their being at sea, long after they passed the Straits, which preceded the American squadron only 48 hours. There was another report in circulation, that the squadron had taken the second sea-port in Algiers, called Oren. Vessels which had arrived from the Straits brought various confirmatory accounts of the stability of the entire capture of the Algerine fleet; but as they admitted particular, as to actual captures, except those already mentioned, they are only entitled to the rank of plausible conjectures. The report of the capture of two frigates and the corvette was confirmed by a letter from Captain Lewis, of the Guerriere, to one of the American consuls in Spain, and by him communicated to Mr. Horatio Sprague, American commission merchant at Gibraltar.
