

POET'S CORNER.

THE STAR IN THE EAST.

SWEETLY along the ethereal way, No spheres its course debate; Behold! while they their race delay, Yon word created world display, Its glories that eclipse the day, Amazing! new born star!

Not diamonds in the deep dark mine, Which spread their beams afar, Nor gems, by radiant charge divine, In cluster'd pleads that shine, Stream along space such rays as thine, Refulgent, new born star!

What wondrous era doth advance, Wrapt round that orbic car? Unfold! unfold! dispel the trance! Bright regent of the pure expanse, Heaven bids thee lead the raptur'd glance.

To still a brighter star! Herald of empyrean light, Than thine superior far! Stream'd from the Father's sapphire height Kindling o'er error's cheerless night, Those rays so merciful, so bright, From Christ, our new-born star!

Where, where?—ye eastern sages sing, And Bethlehem declare, Till Gilboa's dewy mountains ring, And Heaven's own minstrels tune the string.

Where is the babe born Israel's king, Messiah! morning star!

Breathing Arabia's spiciest gale, We hasten from afar; Before us see his herald sail, Bring we rich perfumes of the vale, Would greet the God, adore and hail, Messiah! morning star!

THE PORT FOLIO.

The subscriber, having become the Editor of the Port Folio, in forms the patrons of that journal, that it will be published in future at the "New Publication Office," No. 133, Chestnut street, Philadelphia, where orders addressed to the publisher, will be received, if post paid. Those who have been agents are requested to transmit their orders for the ensuing year.

Liberal and extensive arrangements have been made in the editorial department. The present editor having long enjoyed the friendship and correspondence of the lamented founder of this establishment, he deems it proper to say that the plan of that accomplished scholar, will be the model, which he shall endeavor to imitate in his career—this is to be understood, with an exception of the topics of religion and politics. On these subjects the editor intends to observe a rigid neutrality. It is particularly necessary that this should be understood, because several gentlemen, who entertained different sentiments on the latter subject, from those which he has supported, pugnis et calcibus, in season and out of season, for many years in a neighbouring city, have already with drawn their names from the subscription list of this journal. In a contest of ten years duration conducted with more than usual violence, the editor has learned the important truth that party is the madness of many for the good of a few. This lesson has been inscribed upon his front in LETTERS OF BLOOD; and whatever part he may take, if another conjuncture should jeopardize the lives and fortunes of the friends of the liberty of the press, the patrons of this journal are assured that it shall be exclusively a literary and scientific journal.

The editors of federal papers throughout the U. States are requested to notice this address. The editor of the Port Folio has no right to ask this favor of the gentlemen on the other side of the house; but as he has laid down his arms, they cannot consider him any longer in the character of a belligerent and they may therefore be inclined to aid him in vindicating and supporting the literary reputation of the American Empire.

J. E. HALL.

From the Salem Gazette.

JOHN JAY.

The venerable, the illustrious, the incorruptible, and the intrepid Statesman, JOHN JAY, has, by the blessing of Heaven, lived to behold the shame of his columniators, and the complete triumph and perfect glory of his conduct as a negotiator. He nobly dared to do his duty in defiance of popular odium and senseless clamour. The people raged, and the wicked imagined a vain thing; but he was firm as a rock—he sought only the good of his country; and who now is so base as not to acknowledge he is one of its greatest benefactors, and one of the chief promoters of his country's prosperity and honour?

When he put his name to the famous British Treaty he well knew it would be like pouring oil on the flames of French Jacobinism which were then raging in this country; and as he foresaw, he was again and again hung and burned in effigy in every market square, by Jacobin Mobs—his name was covered with the most foul slanders and the most vulgar obloquy in all the democratic journals and town-meetings: "Bribery" and "British Gold" was the furious outcry against this pure and upright patriot.

Above all, let it never be forgotten, that MONROE, the same man whom some now would fain make President, at that time being Ambassador in France, actually quarrelled with John Jay for not disclosing to him the state of the negotiation with England, so that the same might be communicated to the French Directory! This man actually contended that Washington had no right to make a treaty with G. Britain without first applying to France, and, with Liberty cap in hand, first saying by your leave,

But "time is a friend to truth;" it is even now, in the life time of the immortal JAY, known and acknowledged that he has always been an honest, pure, wise and firm friend of his country; posterity will do justice to his foes, which they know, and tremble.

Extract of a letter from Sergeant Ewart, of the Scots Greys, who in the battle of Waterloo, took a French Eagle, to his brother in Ayr, dated Rouen, 16th August, 1815. After describing in rather an interesting manner the attacks of the 16th and 17th, the Sergeant gives the following detail of the snare which he had in the business of the memorable 18th June.

"The enemy began forming their lines of battle about 9 in the morning of the 18th, we did not commence till 10. I think it was about 11 when we were ready to receive them. They began upon our right with the most tremendous firing that ever was heard, and I can assure you, they got it as hot as they gave it! then it came down to the left, where they were received by our brave Highlanders: no men could ever behave better; our brigade of cavalry covered them. Owing to a column of foreign troops giving way our brigade was forced to advance to the support of our brave fellows, and which we certainly did in style; we charged through two of their columns, each about 5000; it was in the first charge I took the Eagle from the enemy, he and I had a very hard contest for it; he thrust for my groin—I parried it off and cut him through the head; after which I was attacked by one of theirancers, who threw his lance at me, but missed the mark, by my throwing it off with my sword by my right side—then I cut him from the chin upwards, which cut went through his teeth, next, I was attacked by a foot soldier, who after firing at me, charged me with his bayonet—but he very soon lost his combat, for I parried it and cut him down through the head! so that finished the contest for the Eagle. After which I presumed to follow my comrades, Eagle and all, but was stopped by the general, saying to me; "You brave fellow, take that to the rear—you have done enough until you get quit of it, which I was obliged to do, but with great reluctance. I retired to the right and stood there for upwards of an hour, which gave me a general view of the field, but I cannot express the sight I beheld; the bodies of my brave comrades were lying so thick upon the field that it was scarcely possible to pass, and horses innumerable. I took the Eagle into Brussels amidst the acclamations of thousands of the spectators that saw it."
