

cause which induced the Washington people to exclude the Mallen, though not forsaken minister, from their society and association; they perhaps too recollect an ancient, though humble saying, that "birds of a feather flock together."

If Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Adams entertained a different sentiment, if they are solicitous to associate with Mr. Edwards, no one can deny their privilege and right of opinion: If they were chagrined and astounded at the circumstance of his exclusion from the festivities of the day—if they are among those "friends in Washington who love, respect, and admire him! and who thus feel toward him, from a full knowledge of his character, and a thorough conviction of his worth!" no one I presume should question their right also to exclude themselves. But, that these gentlemen, one the Secretary of State, the other War—one a prominent competitor for the presidency of the United States, the other for the vice presidency, should by "any indirection" assume to themselves a right to force upon the good people of this country—the society of a man whose character and veracity they do not approve, is unquestionably the most awful and portentous symptom of inordinate power, of executive boldness, and deterioration of official morals, that this nation has yet witnessed. What! Is it come to this—Are we in our brief day of national existence, so far merged into the fashions and subtleties of the courts of the old world, that the Heads of Departments in our Republican government, can venture to regulate the judgment of the people when they may choose to exercise their legitimate and constitutional prerogative in determining the merit of a candidate public officer?

Is it possible that the high officers of government can desire to palm on society a man whose company it rejects a man convicted of not telling the truth, according to the testimony of the accredited witnesses, as appears in the recorded proceedings of a legal tribunal, because this man happens to be rich, and of senatorial rank and ministerial dignity? Or, because "Cabinet Ministers" may still choose to "love, admire and respect him?" Among Kings and Princes, and the morals of their courts, the robe of office, and the ensign of authority, may throw a halo around the character of any profligate favourite—but should ever this corrupt and anti-republican fashion be imitated by the ministers of this country, (and believe it not impossible,) the intelligence of a free people cannot fail to detect and expose the actors of its unworthy a scene. The solace which the measure affected to impart to the unhappy Mr. Edwards, is altogether secondary, whilst the official, though unmanly attack on Mr. Crawford's reputation, is the primary object. Look at this little production, this letter of a dozen lines, and who can be so simple as to misinterpret the real spirit which gave it shape and form, or the destined purpose of its creation? Not one, I am sure, who is neither interested nor concerned in the wiles and conjurations of the hydra-headed "Edwards Party."

If the reason assigned by Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Adams, for not dining with the people of Washington on the fourth of July, be the only one, why in the name of common sense write such a letter, or, if they must write, why publish it? All that would have been necessary for them to do, under the conviction of what they are pleased to "consider as incompatible with their duties as Ministers," was merely not to be present at the dinner. Their absence would have been as complete by staying away, and holding their peace, as by staying away and editing and promulgating an epistle. Besides, with what reason or propriety can Mr. Secretary Calhoun, and Mr. Secretary Adams, assert, that the "character and conduct of Mr. Edwards being before the nation, upon the report of the committee of the House of Representatives, (is yet to be acted on by the house?" Have charges been preferred against Mr. Edwards? Is he before the committee for trial? Or, is there any probability that he can or will be brought to trial? There is not—Why then speak of the "final decision" of the "House of Representatives?" What has the house to do with Mr. Edwards's "character and conduct?" These have incidentally evolved before a committee of that house. They are already authoritatively presented to the people in ample shape and form—and the people, the fountain of power and of opinion, can judge, just as well as their representatives in congress assembled.

It is as clear as light, therefore, that it cannot be Mr. Edwards's "character and conduct," but Mr. Crawford's "character and conduct," whom the honourable Secretaries graciously inform the people are "yet to be acted upon by the House of Representatives." Hence, it irresistibly follows, that the contemplated effect of their voluntary seclusion was two-fold, and calculated to have extraneous influence beyond the sphere of the Washington society; and that, that influence is political—designed to be propitious to his hopes and interest, because intended to be detrimental to William H. Crawford.

This is the language of "The National Journal" of the 7th inst. as given by the Washington paper.

The doctrine which these politicians have promulgated from the eminence of their official station, is one which ought to awaken the deepest enquiry, and cannot fail to excite the liveliest emotion in the bosom of every true republican. It may answer very well at the Court of St. James, but surely they must greatly err, if they hope to establish it at the metropolis of this republic.

[The Council adjourned yesterday without appointing a successor to Mr. Dorsey, in the office of Attorney-General.]

ARISTOCRACY OF JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

There is a consistency of aristocracy in the political conduct of Mr. John Quincy Adams, which puts it out of the power of his partisans to refute the charge of his entertaining aristocratical opinions. Let us endeavour to recollect certain indisputable facts in the case.

He commenced his career as a writer in the Boston Centinel, with an argument decidedly opposed to Democracy and favourable to the supreme and exclusive authority of government.

When he became a convert to Mr. Jefferson, it was not the Democracy of the country to which he turned, but the Executive power; and the chief reason which he assigned for his vote when he changed was, that the measure was recommended by the President.

Since he has been in the office of Secretary of State his character has been more minutely developed. He refused to consider himself, as an officer of the government, upon a par with the Senators of the United States, and wrote a letter to the Vice President upon the subject of etiquette, as if such a question were appropriate to our republican form of government.

In his quarrel with Gen. Smyth, and in his own office, Mr. Adams directly and rudely asserted that the General had stated what was not true; and in his publications against Gen. Smyth, written to destroy the General's election, but which failed, he unequivocally denounced the Rights of Man; shewing, in these instances, a violent temper and utter disregard of the soundest principles of civil Liberty.

He has hypocritically raised a squabble with the editors of the National Intelligencer, and upon a false pretence, took from them the patronage of his Department, the real cause of which proceeding is well known to be that the Intelligencer did not support him for the Presidency.

When the editors of the National Intelligencer vindicated themselves, Mr. Adams recriminated in the National Journal, in the most vindictive mode, declaring that he had put Messrs. Gales and Seaton "upon their good behaviour," that he would give them just as much public information for their press as he thought proper, and distinctly intimated that a newspaper, to enjoy his favour, must indiscriminately defend his measures.

He has transferred to the National Journal the patronage of the Department of State, and that Journal has proclaimed that it will consider any opposition to the administration, from whatever source or motive, as "treason!" thus upholding, in the most barefaced and audacious manner, the primary political maxim of the Holy Alliance of the Sovereigns of Europe.

If the mind and temper of John Quincy Adams were not deeply and irremediably imbued with principles and feelings highly arbitrary, it could not be possible that there should be such a consistency of aristocratical, and even monarchical, conduct in him as there has been.—It is in the nature of a man like Mr. Adams to become more overbearing as he ascends the ladder of power; and gaining the last round, he would "play such fantastic tricks before high Heaven as would make even Angels weep."—Washington Gaz.

GOOD NEWS FROM ALABAMA.

A letter from a very respectable and intelligent gentleman at Tuscaloosa, in Alabama, to his friend in this district, dated 30th of June last, says,

"For some time back it appeared almost certain that Gen. Jackson would be the favourite of Alabama, but I am now convinced, and it is the firm belief of every intelligent man in this state, that he cannot get the vote of Alabama. So confident are the friends of Mr. Crawford, that they take up all the bets they can get that Jackson does not get the vote of Alabama. The tariff has prostrated Old Hickory in this state. There is one thing very certain, that Gen. Jackson cannot transfer his friends to Adams. His friends are all personal, and as soon as they lose their man, they will go over to Mr. Crawford's standard on political ground."

Washington paper.

SUMMARY.

London papers to the 14th and Liverpool to the 16th ult. have been received at New-York. The following is a summary of the intelligence they contain.

Some of the passengers in the Nestor, from New-York had reached Liverpool—they landed at Kinsale, from which place Mr. Randolph proceeded to London.

Rain having set in at Liverpool, a salutary change in the crops was anticipated.

A change of Ministry has taken place in France, but not such as was expected. Chateaubriand, the minister regarded as the head of the ultra royalist party, has been dismissed from the Cabinet. Villele holds ad interim, the office of Foreign Affairs.

The cause and consequences of this change, do not appear to be comprehended by the London editors. Some of them intimate that it will produce a favourable result, Chateaubriand being, they say, an advocate for the Russian policy, and Villele friendly to the liberal policy of England. The Morning Chronicle concludes some remarks on the subject by saying "We may rest assured that whatever Party prevail in France, it will be hostile to the cause of good government in every part of the world, and that the same objects will still be sought after though by different means—the one giving a preference to violence the other to fraud."

A petition of the Merchants of London, in favor of the independence of the South American States, was to be presented to the H. of Commons on the 11th, by Sir J. Mackintosh.

The infant Don Miguel, of Portugal, has landed at Brest.

Don Felix Castro, appointed to negotiate a loan in England, and General Albar, Deputy to the United States, and his Secretary, arrived at Liverpool the 10th of June from Buenos Ayres.

Lisbon letters state that orders have been given for dismantling the ships intended for the expedition to Brazil, all ideas of such an undertaking being withdrawn, in consequence of negotiations going on in London for settling the dispute between the two countries.

The accounts from Greece were favourable.—The elections were about to take place, and were founded on the principle of universal suffrage, every person in Greece above 21 years of age, being permitted to vote.

The Fairfield, Nelson, has arrived at Liverpool, from Sierra Leone, whence she sailed on the 19th of March. Captain Nelson states, that no intelligence had been received, prior to his sailing, of the rumored defeat of the British troops by the Ashantees on the Gold Coast.

A Chinese beauty, named Yhou-Fung-Queou, has arrived in London. She is the first of her country women who has ever visited England from the "Celestial Empire," she is said to be beautiful, and the King, who is something of a connoisseur in these matters, is to have the first view of her "celestial charms."

With the Greeks every thing is in a prosperous state. Telegraphs by day, and fire signals by night, established in all the islands, apprise them of the slightest movements of the Turks upon all points of the Egean Sea. It is thus that one of their naval squadrons, composed of 18 transports, were surprised, beaten, and destroyed by the Greeks in the anchorage of Suda. This event, the news of which arrived only the evening before Easter Sunday, was followed with a disembarkation of 3,000 insurgents, who had before shut up the Mahometans in their fortresses. The last remittance of £50,000 sterling from London has arrived here. Colonel Stanhope and Lazarus Condonzio, next to the head of the administration of the finances, which at present amount to £200,000 sterling in Spanish money called duros. Maurocordato is now at Vrachori, settling many important affairs with the stratarchs of Etolia and Arcania, relative to the events of the approaching campaign.

A press has been established at Nauplia, which has been sent to the Greek government by Mr. Firmin Didot. It is the second which is lighted typographer has bestowed on the Greeks.

A paragraph from Trieste, May 21, says:—Letters from Corfu of the 12th of this month relate that an English vessel had been attacked in the Gulf of Missolonghi by four Barbary vessels. It would have become their prey but for the sudden appearance of three Greek vessels, which succoured it, and even took an Algerine vessel: the others took refuge in Lepanto.

HILLSBOROUGH BAY—IN FLO-RIDA.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman, dated

Campanet Brooke, E. Florida. "This place is admirably situated, at the head of Hillsborough Bay, about 30 miles from the ocean. The soil is good, the climate delightful, and the situation apparently as healthy as any in the Southern country."

"On the 20th of February, the land was overshadowed by an enormous and almost impervious growth of wire oak, hickory and lignum vitae. More than 100 acres are now cleared, and in the highest state of cultivation, producing an abundant supply of almost every description of garden vegetables. The Bakery and Store houses, with large and extensive Store houses for the Quartermaster & Commissary Departments, are complete. The Quarters for the officers and men are decidedly superior to any thing of the kind I have ever seen. The soldiers quarters are finished, and those for the officers are progressing with surprising rapidity.

"The Hospital is large, spacious and elegant, delightfully situated on a commanding eminence, and appears well calculated for the comfort and convenience of the sick. The Bay affords a profuse supply of fish and oysters, of superior flavour, and the surrounding country an incredible number of deer and turkey.

"The officers and soldiers are delighted with the situation, and the officers have named the Cantonment in honour of the Colonel, who appears to be the life and soul of the whole command. His spirit apparently pervades and animates the breast of every individual, and their exertions have been, and continue to be, incredible.

"The improvements effected within the short space of six weeks, appear more like the result of magic than the labour of 200 men.

"The situation is certainly the most desirable I have seen in the South, and I think it will soon become a place of some consequence.

"Vessels of sixteen feet draft can approach to within three miles of the Cantonment, where they can lie in perfect safety: those of 8 or 9 feet draft, can discharge over a common plank, within a few feet of the Quartermaster and Commissary's store houses.

"One of the officers informed me, that Colonel Brooke had discovered a good site for Mills, and contemplates erecting a saw and grist mill for the benefit of the troops, and to facilitate the settlement of the country."

THE SPRINGS. The Saratoga Sentinel of the 13th inst. states that there was then at the Springs from 5 to 600 strangers.

SINGULAR LAW CASE.

A man by the name of Smith, cut off the ears of one Taylor, in Nassau, New Providence; he was tried and convicted under the statute of Mayhem, which is a capital offence; an arrest of judgment was moved, on the ground that the ear was not a "member of the body," as referred to in the statute.

The Court took a week to consider, and gave a learned opinion, shewing that the ear was a member of the body, and in citing authorities, the following were referred to from St. Paul, in his first epistle to the Corinthians:

14. For the body is not one member, but many.

15. If the foot shall say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16. And if the ear shall say, because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it not therefore of the body?

17. If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18. But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it has pleased him.

Sentence of death was then solemnly pronounced by the Court.
