

For the Md. Gazette.
Mr. Green,
There has lately been put in extensive circulation through Maryland, a pamphlet signed "Jesse Benton," abounding in charges against General Jackson, about which, I think, the good people of the State should be put on their guard. That it is nothing but an electioneering trick must be manifest from the time and manner of its appearance before the public. It is alleged to have had its origin in the state of Tennessee, and that the author of it is a man of respectability, and the brother of an United States Senator, thus giving it an imposing aspect, and a semblance of truth (although evidently a fabrication) by the respectability of a name. It is further intimated, that it has been ushered to the public by the friends of Mr. Crawford, but this artifice is entirely too shallow to escape detection. If the friends of Mr. Crawford were the authors of its publication, they would have no sufficient motive to give it so extensive a circulation in this electoral district, where they have no hope whatever of success; on the contrary where it is their wish, as it is evidently their interest, that General Jackson should succeed. The people of Maryland are not to be duped by such Yankee management. That the handbill came from the North and not from the South, and that it was published and fabricated by Mr. Adams or his friends, and not by Mr. Crawford or his friends, every man in his senses must believe from the mysterious manner of its appearance, its evident object, and the probable effect to be produced by it. Why is such particularity necessary in stating that it came from the North, but because it in fact came from the North, or was put in circulation by a northern man. Why drag in Gates & Son? Why simply to have it believed Mr. Adams and his friends had nothing to do with it; it is evidently then, (I repeat it) a Yankee trick and one of no ordinary cunning. Why are the friends of Adams so desirous to discuss between the friends of Jackson and Crawford; to withdraw from Jackson the aid he might expect from the friends of Crawford, thereby defeating Jackson's election and securing that of Adams. I caution the Freeman of the district to beware, it is a worse imposition than the Wooden Nutmegs.
CRAWFORD.

To the Editor of the Md. Gazette.
A consciousness of the good feeling which exists between the adherents of Mr. Crawford and General Jackson in this district, induces me to solicit of you the favour of inserting the following in your next paper:
For the Md. Gazette.
The partisans of Mr. Adams in this district have put in requisition all their cunning, and all their influence to secure his election in it. Handbills without number puffing him for a thousand charitable actions, which he never performed, have been put in circulation by them to fool the people, and to excite them into the belief that Mr. Adams is a paragon of human excellence and benevolence. The practical lesson, however, which he furnished in the case of Mrs. Moulton, is of too recent a date to permit success to attend impositions of this kind. What sort of charity did Mr. Adams display in that case? Let me see what General Van Ness certifies that Mr. Adams said to him concerning the debt which the latter answered for the lady in question. The General says, "Mr. Adams informed me that to secure himself, he had taken from Mrs. Moulton a BILL OF SALE OF TRANSFER OF HER GOODS." Now is this an act which deserves to be ranked among deeds of charity, when it is considered, that at the very time it was performed, Mr. Adams lady was owing Mrs. Moulton a sum of money in all probability nearly equal to the pitiful debt for which he had consented to become responsible. If Mr. Adams have no stronger recommendations to the good opinion of the intelligent voters of this district, than his acts of charity, I can safely venture to assure his friends, that the publication of them will not retrieve his lost popularity, or effect his election in this district. Were the Jackson candidates to withdraw tomorrow, the votes of a large majority of his supporters would be given to the Crawford electors. To cut this matter short, Mr. Adams will not, under any circumstances, come in for the two electors from this district. He has been weighed in the balance and found wanting.
A few words about the letter said to be written by a Clergyman in Washington, and which lauds Mr. Adams in the most extravagant manner for his charitable disposition, and I will leave Mr. Adams to reap all the advantages which empty and unearned praise can procure for him. Was that letter written by the Unitarian Clergyman in whose church Mr. Adams holds a pew? or, is it a sheer fabrication circulated by the Baltimore Adamsites, merely to trick the countrymen out of our votes, as they very often do out of fair prices for the produce we carry to their market?

TOWN MEETING.
General La Fayette having accepted the invitation to Annapolis, which was given him by the Corporation, a public meeting was convened by the Mayor, on Saturday the 23d inst. in order to afford to the citizens at large an opportunity of testifying their respect and affection for our illustrious Guest.
The meeting was organized by the appointment of the Mayor as Chairman, and Addison Ridout, as Secretary.
The object of the meeting having been explained by the chairman, and a short address delivered by James F. Brice, Esq. it was unanimously resolved that arrangements be immediately made for welcoming our honoured visitor in a manner which would comport with the simplicity of our republican institutions, shall at the same time most strongly manifest the cordial and heartfelt attachment of our citizens to their country's benefactor and friend.
The following gentlemen were then appointed a committee for carrying the above resolution into effect: James Boyle, Esq. Mayor, the honourable J. T. Chase, the hon. Theodorick Bland, Col. Maynadier, John Randall, sen. Nicholas Brewer, sen. Doctor Claude, J. J. Speed, Thomas H. Carroll, William Kilty, John N. Watkins, Doctor Ridgely, Lewis Nett, jr. and Addison Ridout.
It was also resolved, that the committee be instructed to confer with Col. Jones, commander of the garrison at Fort Severn, and request his assistance and co-operation in making the necessary arrangements for the reception of General La Fayette.
JAMES BOYLE, Chairman.
ADDISON RIDOUT, Sec'y.

MRS. MOULTON.
Having published the deposition of Mrs. Moulton, which was intended by the injudicious friends of Mr. Adams to contradict the statements of Mr. Kerr, General Van Ness, and Mr. Thomas, which have appeared in print, we owe it to the cause of truth and fairness to make it known to the public, that a narrative of the deponent's life and character has appeared in a newspaper printed in Middletown, (Connecticut,) the place of her birth and early life, which proves her testimony to be utterly unworthy of credence. It is a defamatory article, and restrains us from republishing the article alluded to at full length, but any person having the curiosity to satisfy himself, or incredulous as to the fact, may see the original by calling at the office. So much is the wisdom of this course, which seeks support from such a source.
N. Y. Evening Post.

ALL OVER.
The people of Boston have had a great meeting in relation to the Presidency, and the Courier, after giving the details, concludes as follows: "There was the most perfect unanimity in the expression of opposition and dislike towards Mr. Adams. The Centinel, a press hitherto friendly to Mr. Adams, publishes the unpledged independent electoral tickets, which there is no longer any doubt will prevail in Massachusetts. A friend from New Jersey, as sure as it that the ticket opposed to Mr. Adams, in that state, will succeed by a considerable majority. In Maryland, Jackson has cut in upon him, and from the general aspects of affairs throughout the Union it is very evident that Mr. Adams must be withdrawn; very serious doubts are entertained of his getting into the House of Representatives.
This is what was expected, and what in fact is right; Mr. Adams can unite no party; conciliate no interest; he has no political consistency, and his temper, and management have very justly alarmed the people. The late attempt of his friends in this city, to array the north against the south, have terminated his hopes in this state."
N. York Nat. Adv.

PROFESSION AND PRACTICE.
With all the professions of regard for the rights of the people, and for the due exercise of a freedom of opinion, which have been made by the adherents of John Quincy Adams, it cannot have escaped observation that they have endeavoured by their clamours and denunciations to prevent the exercise of a free and honest opinion when it has differed from their own. While people have been disposed to worship their demi-god, and throw up their hats, and shout their huzzas for the great diplomatist; all has been very well; and the exercise of opinion has been very agreeable to them, but the moment any other candidate appeared to be the object of choice, they have endeavoured by their clamorous denunciations of the candidate and his advocates, to alarm their fears, excite their local jealousies, and arouse their passions, in such a manner, as to render it dangerous or unpleasant for any man to express an opinion in favour of the object of their choice.
Against Mr. Crawford, principally, this kind of artillery has been levelled—and the reason of it is obvious. Mr. Crawford has always stood so high in the estimation of the public, and the prospect of his election has always been so great, as to place all his competitors in the background; and consequently, the principal object of the advocates of the Secretary of State has been to destroy his powerful rival. Hence they have employed every artifice to render Mr. Crawford odious, and make his supporters objects of scorn and derision; and where their clamours could not avail them, they have been able to do so, they have used the arm of power to injure the candidate, and destroy the standing of those who were so audacious as to oppose the cabinet candidate.
Thus, the National Intelligencer, because they had the assurance to prefer Mr. Crawford to Mr. Adams, were attacked by the latter, and he undertook to employ the patronage of his office against them, wherever there have been a majority in favour of the testy diplomatist, it has been the endeavour of his supporters to render the name of Crawford odious, they have exerted pledges of all who offered themselves as candidates for offices, to use their exertions against Crawford, and those who refused to give them, have been made objects for the finger of scorn to be pointed at; and by their intrigues and meddling where they had no business to interfere, they have endeavoured to destroy the peace and happiness of men in their private intercourse. It is because of their preferring Mr. Crawford to Mr. Adams! This is the republican Mr. Adams; and such is the conduct of his republican supporters!
Are we asked for an evidence of the truth of the last declaration? We are prepared to give. Dr. Baldwin, of Boston, a man excellent and upright man, and one of the whom the tongue of slander has not dared to slip a word was prevailed upon to stand as a candidate on the electoral ticket proposed to Mr. Adams, but no sooner was done, than the whole host of the Secretary's supporters were upon him, and against him.

This he regarded not, and he withstood all their malicious shafts, and esteemed them as idle wind. But at length they wormed themselves among the members of the P. A. church, denouncing the name of the Presidential candidate whom the Dr. preferred, stigmatized his advocates, and by means of all their influence and all their power being employed among those who whose concerns they had no right to interfere, they produced, in the church, such an excitement, as induced the Dr. for the sake of preserving peace among the members of it, to decline standing a poll!
It is not to be presumed that the excitement arises from any attachment to the cause of Mr. Adams, among the members of the church; for we verily believe that they will generally, if not unanimously, oppose him. Their general character, contrasted with the opinions and practice of the Secretary, warrants this belief; and urges us to the conclusion that nothing but the existence of a regret to see their veritable and esteemed pastor, made the subject of such vituperative and unparagoned abuse, by the partisans of Adams, has induced them to wish the Dr. to withdraw his name.
Those who have procured the withdrawal of the name from the list of electors have gained but little, by their success, as the manner in which Dr. Baldwin speaks of the ticket is such that the papers devoted to Mr. Adams are afraid to publish it; and will in all probability, secure for Mr. Crawford all the votes that he would have received had the writer remained at the head of it.
If those men had one particle of regard for the freedom of opinion, about which they are perpetually clamouring, and to which they make such loud pretensions, why should they endeavour to prevent the exercise of it by Dr. Baldwin? Is he not, as well as another, entitled to the privilege of choosing? Certainly he has. But the substance of the matter is, that they are willing for those who think with them, to enjoy their opinions, but all others must be bullied, belied, denounced, insulted and tormented, if possible, out of their opinions. We are not aware that a single instance has ever occurred of the friends of Mr. Crawford ever endeavouring to prevent, in any shape, the exercise of a free choice, by any other persons. They have occupied the ground of fair argument, they have honestly advocated the cause of their favorite, and when others have differed with them in opinion, they have not raged, stormed and denounced them, as liars, traitors and vagabonds, as has been so frequently the case with the advocates of Mr. Adams. Let the people determine which is right, and which is wrong.
Del. Gaz.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.—We have seen the account of the Proceedings of a convention of Republican Delegates to form an Electoral Ticket for New Jersey. A bare majority of those on this ticket are said to be in favour of Gen. Jackson—the remainder in favour of Mr. Crawford. The ticket, it is supposed, will be supported by the friends of both. Another ticket is a boat to be formed, the National Gazette informs us, by the friends of Mr. Adams; so that two tickets will be run in New Jersey.
The proceedings of the Federalists in Boston forms an interesting article of intelligence, because, as we understand, their course will be decisive of the election in that State. We have not here the means of forming an opinion as to the extent of the determination of the gentlemen of the Federal party to support the Unpledged Ticket. The Boston Statesman, however, in publishing these Proceedings, says there is no doubt that the unpledged ticket will prevail.
One or two meetings have been also held at Boston and elsewhere in Massachusetts, of the friends of Gen. Jackson and Mr. Clay, resolving that they, too, will support the unpledged ticket of electors, and of course with all their power the pledged ticket.

CAUTION AGAINST MISREPRESENTATIONS.
It was not without reason we warned our readers, the other day, against the representations of the enemies of Mr. Crawford, made with a view to prejudice his election where it is too late for refutation to overtake them. One of them regards the state of his health, respecting which we have heard that the most unjust representations are privately circulated, and industriously circulated. We know all the bitterness of the enemies of Mr. Crawford, but this article, we think, is unworthy of the honorable part of them. At any rate, if reported to, let our readers be on their guard against it, and believe rather their friends than their adversaries. Mr. Crawford is well enough to transact business daily, at his office. We are authorized, by recent personal intercourse with him, to say, that his intellectual faculties are in full vigor, and that he is at this moment as competent to the transaction of any description of business requiring mental energy, as he ever was—and quite adequate to the discharge of any duties which his present office, or that of President of the United States, may devolve upon him. A letter published in the Virginia Herald lays hold of the fact of his not being present at the La Fayette Dinner in this city, as proof of his ill health. How was the fact? Why simply this: Mr. Crawford was in town all day—he resides three miles off in the country, and is the only Head of a Department who does—and the Dinner did not take place until night, and it was not convenient for him to remain to attend it.

From the Raleigh Register.
To the Friends of General Jackson.
There is no one who can wish more heartily for the success of Gen. Jackson, than myself. I prefer him because I believe that he is capable, that he is honest, that he is just, and more identified with the people themselves than any other candidate. He is emphatically the people's candidate. He is not pushed forward by greedy expectants. No hiring price has been attributed to him for his praise. It is a movement of the people alone, and their voices I trust will be heard.

But let the consciousness be what they may, I should be prepared in order to remove false impressions, should any unwelcome suit, to declare, that my consent to being placed on the people's ticket, was, and still is, solely with the understanding of being elected, for General Jackson as President. I feel myself bound by this understanding; and I rejoice that I have not published my old-fashioned Republican principles, that the Representative is bound to obey the voice, or if you please, the instructions of his constituents.
Candour and fair dealing, with the most highly respectable gentlemen in this county, as well as in other parts of the State, demand this declaration, that it may be distinctly known, that no understanding on my part, can, here, or elsewhere exist, to vote for Mr. Adams.

PORTER BREWERY.
An idea of the immense extent to which the brewing of porter is carried on in the city of London may be formed by the following description of Barclay's brewery:—If any private concern in England, or in the world, is entitled to the epithet of "Vastness," this is one. It covers about eight acres of ground, and manufactures last year 331,474 barrels, of 36 gallons each. The buildings which contain the vast steam engines are enormous. The average number of valves is nearly 100. A steam engine of 22 horse power is employed in driving the machinery, and about two hundred men are engaged in the various works of the establishment; it is supposed that the number of persons dependent upon it without doors, in the sale and transportation of the beer, is three or four thousand. The three copper cylinders in which the beer is boiled hold each 150 barrels. Twenty-five gentlemen once dined in one of these copper, after which fifty of the workmen got in and regaled themselves. One hundred and ninety pounds of beef steaks were thus consumed in one day, in this novel kind of dining room. The tuns in which the beer ferments hold 1400 barrels each. The carbonic acid in one of these tuns holds three and a half feet above the liquor, and pours over the side in a continued stream. A candle's instant extinction on being placed near the outer edge of this receptacle, and on holding one's face near it, a sharp pungent sensation is felt in the mouth and face, not very unlike that produced by ardent spirits. An immersion of a few moments would be fatal. One hundred and sixty horses are kept on the premises, for the purpose chiefly of transporting the materials to and from different parts of the city.

Chancery Sale.
By virtue of a decree of the Court of Chancery, the subscriber will expose to public sale, on the premises, on Tuesday the 33d day of November next, if fair, if not the next day thereafter, the farm on which Benjamin Hancock resides, lying on the Hundred and ninety-seven acres. It is deemed unnecessary to give a full and particular description of this property, as it is presumed those willing to purchase will view it previous to the day of sale. The improve-ments consist of a comfortable framed dwelling house, and all other necessary out buildings. The terms of sale are, that the purchaser or purchasers shall give bond, with security, for the payment of the purchase money, with interest from the day of sale, at ten and twelve months. On payment of the purchase money, the subscriber is authorized to convey to the purchaser or purchasers the said property free clear, and discharged from all claim of the Complainant or Defendant. Sale to commence at 12 o'clock.

Tobacco Lands
On the 9th day of December next, at 11 o'clock, A. M. if fair, if not, the next day thereafter, the subscriber will offer at public sale, on the premises, his valuable REAL ESTATE, situate on the north side of Severn River, opposite the City of Annapolis, containing upwards of about six hundred covered with wood and heavy timber, consisting of white oak, black walnut and poplar, &c. the residue for the most part under good fences—the whole nearly surrounded by the waters of the Severn river, and a wide navigable creek, emptying into the Chesapeake Bay, which afford convenient water carriage for wood and produce from almost every part of the land.
It is at present divided into two farms, both in a promising state of improvement, and possessing large banks of oyster shells, and other sources of manure in great abundance. Plaster has been found to act with great effect on these lands in promoting the growth of clover—the soil is principally clay, of an excellent quality for grain and other crops; and particularly well adapted to the culture of first quality tobacco. There is a good water mill adjoining these lands, and a steam mill in Annapolis, both very convenient to this estate. These two farms will be divided into smaller ones of from 200 to 300 acres each—which will be shown on a plot on the day of sale.
The buildings on both the Farms are beautifully situated and command extensive views of the river & bay. Terms of sale, one fourth cash, the residue in three equal annual payments, on interest from the sale, on bond and security. The subscriber will treat for the above lands at private sale, at any time previous to the day appointed for public auction.
