

THE CONSPIRACY. PROGRESS OF THE TRIALS. THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

Interesting Evidence.

We published yesterday a detailed account of the proceedings of the trial of John Wilkes Booth at Washington on Saturday, engaged in the trial of the parties charged with being concerned in the assassination plot against the late President and his cabinet. The progress of the trial is now such that the testimony from the point where our report closed.

They remained in her house, as W. Wilkes Booth testified they usually were, from 10 o'clock on Saturday, to Baltimore. Witness identified Booth by his photograph, and that the photograph was a portrait of him. He was a "better looking man," Witness said, than the man who looked like a respectable mechanic stopped with the prisoners named at night, and left the room early in the morning. O'Laughlin and Arnold said to her that they were engaged in the trade. Letters came frequently to one of the other men. The trial at the house about the 20th of March, she believes, that they were going to Philadelphia.

Question—How was his conduct? Answer—He was as usual, as far as I was concerned. Question—Was he in good spirits? Answer—Very much so, coming down to the day of the trial. Question—Any nervousness? Answer—No, sir. Question—Will you tell us whether you were near the National Hotel during Friday or Saturday evening? Answer—We were not near the National Hotel during Friday or Saturday evening. Question—What induced you to stay later than you usually do? Answer—I was in the liquor. Question—Did not Lieut. Henderson press you to go to bed? Answer—He did not. Question—Judge Advocate Bringham, on the ground that it was a cross-examination as to whether you were in the room, did you not recognize any of the prisoners as the respectable looking mechanic who visited the prisoners and had names? Answer—Yes, sir. Witness knew Williams, colored, whom he had carried to the National Hotel, and he had seen him there. He had also seen him at the National Hotel. He had also seen him at the National Hotel. He had also seen him at the National Hotel.

Question—How late was that? Answer—I don't exactly recollect; we staid round until about 7 and 8 o'clock, and then went back to the National Hotel. THE CONTRACTY TRIAL.—The subject at Washington having decided to make public the proceedings of the military trial which is engaged in trying the prisoners implicated in the Lincoln assassination and the attempt upon the life of Secretary Seward, voluminous reports of all the evidence so far taken has been furnished for publication to each party and the Government deems it proper to withhold for prudential reasons. The extreme length of the reports and the time necessarily occupied in writing them, and the fact that it is to reach us, in great part, at a late hour at night, and the telegraph is necessarily used for their conveyance. The intense interest, however, which the public exhibits in the trial, and the great importance, induce us to undertake the burden and bear with whatever inconvenience may be necessary to accomplish the task of giving us promptly as possible the evidence before the members of The Sun. It must occupy from day to day much space, and greatly burden our columns, but it is every day's evidence, and the tragedy and the conspiracy, which prompted it, will be watched and searched with unflagging spirit in every quarter.
