

ment comes after careful, scientific and professional examination of these structures? The Short Line company has too much at stake to risk the lives of hundreds of people daily, and it would be homicide pure and simple were it to attempt such a thing. There is no question of the safety of these bridges and those who know whereof they speak affirm this to be true.

OUR BIRTHDAY

This is the birthday anniversary of Annapolis. The dear old girl is one hundred and ninety-nine years old today. Nearly two centuries ago she was granted her charter as a bailiwick of this commonwealth of Maryland by Queen Anne. God bless her, for at that time she little dreamed what a great and glorious thing she was doing.

Annapolis, city of Anne. We are named for her and she, if she knows anything about it today, must feel proud of us. We left off our swaddling clothes years and years ago but we grew slowly, very slowly. We were not precocious, but as quiet, staid and dignified in our youth as we are in our old age. Still we are not old, we are 199 years young today and we feel as chipper as a girl of sixteen.

Tonight we invite the whole town to come to our birthday party. It will be in the House of Delegates at the State House at 8 o'clock. We hope to see all of our friends there and we expect no birthday presents except the encouragement of your presence and an effort on your part to boom our two hundredth anniversary a year hence. At tonight's birthday party we shall feel the pulse of our citizens on the question of a celebration of next year when we round out two centuries. If the pulse is weak at tonight's festivities, then next year's project dies a-borning.

There is a good deal of cause for Thanksgiving in the fact that the Thanksgiving turkey market is over-stocked.—Baltimore Sun.

Blessed are the pie-makers, for they shall inherit Annapolis, says the Bentztown Bard. Wonder if he means the Baptist chicken pie makers.

Mobile declines to get on the water wagon with the rest of the state of Alabama. It looks much as if the South is about to have another secession.

A man in Connecticut broke his collar bone while kissing a girl. His kiss was so strenuous he missed his footing and fell, sustaining the injury. Now, Maryland men don't kiss in just that way. They always take a pretty sure stand and are sure of their footing. But of cold blooded New Englanders, however, you cannot expect much less than a broken collar bone if they ever enthuse enough to indulge in osculation.

Many objections, many unfavorable comments, many regrets and no end of criticisms are heard relative to the Notice to Tax-Payers of 1906.

Office of Collector and Treasurer, Annapolis, Md., Nov. 19th 1907

I again notify the taxpayers of the year 1906, that, if their taxes are not paid on or before December 15th, 1907, the property upon which said taxes are due will be levied on and thirty days after the levy is made, the said property will be advertised and sold to enforce payment of said taxes. This is absolutely the last public notice that I shall give and I therefore suggest that strict attention be given to this notice, so that every one may pay their taxes in time to avoid the payment of extra costs thus necessarily attend the levy and advertisement.
