Hanson Hill (site)
Pomfret vic.
Private

late 17th century
late 19th century

Hanson Hill was described in a 1970 survey as a "large rambling Victorian dwelling (one room comprised the original dwelling of the Hanson family...). The gable roof ran north to south and was broken by interior chimneys in three places. A rear or west wing addition had a gable roof and a one-story porch and interior chimney centered on its north wall.

Hanson Hill was destroyed by fire in 1969. The site was investigated in 1970 by J. Richard Rivoire. At that time, the house was described as ruinous. However, several "interesting" outbuildings were still intact at that time. In addition, the surveyor noted a small Hanson family cemetery located south of the house and enclosed by an iron fence.

Local tradition asserts that a portion of the house that once stood on the site was the late 17th century dwelling of the prominent Hanson family. The property was later acquired by Walter H.J. Mitchell from Elizabeth Caroline Margaret Bell Hanson Clagett and her husband, William Harrison Clagett around 1853. John H. Mitchell, a prominent Charles County lawyer, lived on the property circa 1865.
