

343 students of Honor Roll; they went to jail for rights

A total of 343 students, most of them from Morgan State College, others from Johns Hopkins University and Goucher College, were jailed in Baltimore this week over a three-day period because they sought to enter Northwood Theatre.

Located a block from Morgan's campus, the theatre has banned colored patrons for eight years, despite repeated appeals to management to scrap its white-only policy.

Under the guidance of Baltimore Mayor Philip Good-Goucher, College, was joined in Baltimore this week over a three-day period because they sought to enter Northwood Theatre.

still sleeping, went into the kitchen, took a piece of paper from the trash, set it afire on the gas stove and dropped it back into the trash can.

After starting the fire she became afraid and did not wake her sleeping mother immediately.

This led to a "delayed discovery" and the blaze had enveloped the three-story building turning it into a roaring furnace before the arrival of firemen, Lt. Aleszczyk said.

The flames quickly spread up the kitchen wall, then along the hallway.

The child waited, then woke her mother.

By this time, the flames had reached the bed where Darlene was sleeping but Goldsmith managed to pull her out and carry her outside.

Mrs. Ferbee led her other children to safety.

The fire spread quickly up the stairway to the second-floor apartment of Mrs. Hodges.

She jumped from bed, picked up her youngest child, Germaine, 23 months, and started to lead her other four children down the flaming stairway.

Mrs. Hodges, bundling Germaine against her to protect her from the fire, managed to get outside screaming—but the flames blocked the path of the four girls.

Her screams were heard by Mrs. Jacqueline Anderson, 23, who lives at 2123 N. Grant St.

Mrs. Anderson called to her husband, the Rev. Jesse Anderson, who was preparing to go to the Episcopal Church of the Advocate, 18th and Diamond Sts., where he is curate.

Mrs. Anderson called firemen, Mr. Anderson ran across the street and told the women to take refuge in his home from the sub-freezing temperatures.

Firemen pumped water into the ground floor of the building for 15 minutes before they were able to go to the second floor, where the children were trapped.

Three bodies were found at the head of the stairs, the fourth in a front bedroom near the window.

The Rev. Mr. Anderson kicked open the door of the locked glass door at the front apartment and rescued Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stewart and their five children, aged 12 years to five months.

All were coughing from smoke that had filled their rooms.

The flames spread to the third floor, where they awakened Warren Steven, 49, who lives alone in an apartment there.

Steven opened his door and found the stairs in flames. He lowered a metal collapsible ladder through a rear window and clambered down to safety.

The flames next broke through the roof and spread across to the top floor of the other side of the building, apartments at 2124 N. Grant St.

Five persons living there escaped uninjured.

They were John Bowman, 69, his wife, Nancy, 62, a son Ozan, 44; a daughter, Mrs. Myrtis Pelzer, 44, and Mrs. Elsie Gibson, 75.

One Ferbee child, Darlene, 4, suffered burns of the face and body. She was admitted to Temple University Hospital. The other children, unharmed, were Cynthia, 5; Edward, 2; and Denise, six months.

Mrs. White screamed hysterically when firemen took her to Temple University Hospital.

back. "I have always paid my taxes on time. The Internal Revenue Service has challenged my taxes for those years and they are now in the civil court—not criminal court."

Answering the charge that the government did not seem to be pressing its tax case against him, Powell laughed heartily.

"The United States tax court is three years behind in its cases. The only way they can take up my case is put it ahead of the others that have been pending. It will probably be a year or two before my case is reached."

When Powell pointed out that over 100 members of the House had relatives on the payroll, Mollenhoff leaped in to say that he had just queried, trying hard for just the slightest injection of incredulity in his voice.

"Oh, yes," boomed Powell. The question of counterpart funds was also dissected by Powell.

"In 1961, $24,000,000 of counterpart funds were unused and could not be used. In 1962, $14,000,000 were unused. The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Dillon, told Congressman Cohelan of California, when asked what would happen to counterpart funds now that the House had stopped the use of them, 'The only thing there is to put a match to them.'"

POWELL ALSO reminded the reporters, including Mollenhoff, that the night he was in the Club Lido with two guests, Sen. Estes Kefauver was there with 10 guests and they both were spending counterpart funds.

"But, but, but Mr. Chairman," stammered Mollenhoff and it went on and on like that for about 45 minutes until everybody became tired including Mollenhoff.

And the anti-Powell faction of America had found itself a new champion besides Drew Pearson and Sen. Williams-Clark R. Mollenhoff.

the hundreds assembled, including inmates in jail for crimes much greater than wanting to go to the movies.

TEARS OF JOY flowed freely; shrieks of happiness drifted throughout the "death trap" where the young women were jailed and the third-tier "dormitory" where the men were housed.

There was solemn moments, too.

The Rev. Howard Cornish, chaplain at Morgan, knelt to give thanks that "somebody else was helping us," in addition to the lawyers and prison officials who earned glowing praise from the students.

All knelt and all prayed.

Then began preparations to go home.

DR. MARTIN D. JENKINS, reached at his Morgan office, gave this reaction: "I find great gratification in the fact that a solution has been arrived at recognizing the accomplishment of the students.

"I would like to give recognition to the leadership shown by Mayor Goodman, who really did a job on this thing.

"As president of Morgan State College, I congratulate him.

"Naturally I'm happy that the students can now get back to the job of getting an education to prepare themselves for full integration in American life."

Some student reactions: "The output was great, but the reward is greater," said Miss Thelma Taylor.

Miss Sandra Upshur, executive secretary of CIG, who went to jail "to take care of the girls," said: "I was born in New York, attended school in Switzerland and Africa. But I've never been confronted by anything like Baltimore.

"THERE IS a lot to do and the young people will do it.
