

Those colored folks in New York do not have the courage of their convictions and are willing to back it with ten thousand dollars, to say the least, have ten thousand dollars' worth of race pride.

We shall now have the Maryland Legislature on our hands, and just what that notable body of lawmakers will do is past the comprehension of the ordinary mortal. A State Legislature is capable of doing almost anything in this land and we have had some experience with Maryland Legislatures.

Before the Police Board gets through its present job we are afraid that some one is going to get his feelings hurt. A shake up all around would no doubt be a good thing for the whole police force, for altogether it is not all that it might be.

One of our local contemporaries is a real funny, in fact much of a joker, but it is constantly getting off something real amusing. Its latest along this line is its comparing itself to the New York World, a paper of world-wide prominence.

It speaks of using large type in the setting of its paper, and makes the statement with all gravity that it has set the pace and in many respects, is like its great New York contemporary, when as a matter of fact it has its paper set up in large type with a liberal use of leads in order to fill up because of dearth of news and lack of means to secure it. Our contemporary reminds us very much of the fox who met with the misfortune of losing its tail in a trap, and who called a convention of foxes for the purpose of showing how well foxes could get along without tails. Notwithstanding his frequent appeal to the foxes to have their tails docked, long tails were still the fashion to the day of his death. Our contemporary may extol on the advantages of big type and plenty of leads, but most newspapers will try and get along with smaller type and more news, they believe the people want news and not white paper.
