FAIRHAVEN WILL CELEBRATE

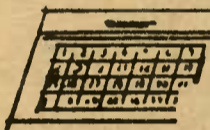

from the
PASTORS DESK.

I want to say, first of all, that I am very glad to be the pastor of this church during this special time in its life. If there is anything that I consider to be important, it is to remember one's roots. And I am so glad that this church is taking the time to do something like this.

When I say "remember," I do not mean that we should live in the past; but rather by trying to remember, I believe that we can learn from the past. There is an old saying to the effect that if people do not learn the lessons of history, then they are bound to repeat the same mistakes. I realize that we in our culture have not done a very good job of that, but I do hope that we in the church can learn.

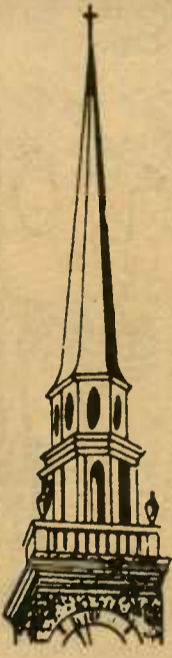

As I have done some of the research for the Historical Committee, I was impressed with a number of things that some people probably do not remember. I guess I realize now how difficult it was to bring about a merger of three churches, all of which were different and in many ways perhaps should have stayed apart for several more years. I heard from former pastor Doug Harton and from other ministers to whom I have talked, how much anger there was and how much pressure there was on them.

But looking back on those days, I am glad that Doug Harton and Bill Heslop
