meeting, held near Sandy Springs, in this county, is taken from the Washington "Star."

A Republican meeting was held about one mile and a half from Sandy Springs, at the schoolhouse, in the northern part of Berry's district, Montgomery county, Md., on Saturday last. About.15 persons were present, of whom some 20 were Republicans, and the remainder Bell, Douglas, and Breckinridge men. The meeting was not formally organized, and Mr. Kontgomery Balr, republican, Introduced himself to the audience and spoke about one hour and twenty minutes. He squoted from Benton's Thirty Years and from Mr. Clay, upon the doctrine of republicanism, and read a letter from Mr. Calboun, dated 1730, which he said helought was addressed to Mr. Yancey, in which the writer urged that the slavery question ought to be forced upon the people of the North. He closed by speaking in complimentary terms, and denouncing Mr. Breckinridge and his party as disminosists, and invited all conservative, Union-loving men to come over to the republican, and that Mr. Blair had a right to enunciate his opinions, provided those opinions did not partake of an incendiary character. He considered Mr. Blair's statement just previousite in the States." Mr. D. held that the remarks last quoted evinted a disposition to interfere with the slave question in the States. He argued that the Baltimore Convention was devised at Silver Spring in order to send Mr. Blair to the Chicago Charention as a prominent republican from Maryland, and that an insignificant few had attempted in this way to have the State." Mr. D. held that the remarks last quoted evinted a disposition to interfere with the slave question in the States. He argued that the Baltimore Convention was devised at Silver Spring in order to send Mr. Blair to the Chicago Charention as a prominent republican from Maryland, and that an insignificant few had attempted in this way to have the State of Maryland, and that an insignificant few had attempted in this way to have the State of Maryland, and that an insign in any way with republicanism, and asserted that they would yote the Bell and Everet ticket to a man. Another means had been re sorted to to bring the Quakers into the affail sorted to to bring the Quakers into the aliant by advertising this meeting to take place at Sandy Springs, (a Quaker locality.) so as to have the prestige of the high character the Quakers have all over the country; but the fact that this meeting had to be held a mile and a half from Sandy Springs was sufficient to show that the Quaker citizens were in no way identified with the matter, and that they do not in any way countenance republicanism.

Mr. Blair rejoined, by explaining his remarks at the Baltimore Republican Convention, and

The beroism of our common ancestry, the blood they shed in the cause of freedom, our mutual prosperity, demands it. But if the Union is to be sustained by trampling upon the constitution and oppressing my section because it is the weaker, then (folding his arms and stamping his foot, while his eye flashed fire,) I om a traitor, and you can make the most of it?

This was received with immense and prolonged cheering, many rising up and whirling their handkerchiefs. This was accompanied by a voiley of hisses coming from all parts of the house. The orator stood immorable, with his arms folded, as the shouters attempted time and again, to drown the hisses. Finally, order being restored, he, his arms still folded, in a soft tone, said:

which was prolonged for several minutes.

While he was addressing an audience at Jacksanville, ih that State, the following incident occurred. A note was handed to him, which he read.—It was couched in the most politic terms, and artended an earnest and presenting invitation to the Hoa. Mr. Corwin to visit—only one mile distant—the "tend of Hardia," who had been "velocomed in Mexico by bloody hands and a hospitable grave it." Corwin was thundratruck. He put the natedown, took it up, twisted it, hung his head, and said nothing.
