William Merryman, informs his friends and the voters of the city and county at large, THAT he continues to solicit their patronage for the office of SHERIFF, at the ensuing election. September 12 d

To the Voters Of the City and County of Baltimore. GENTLEMEN, THE subscriber having devoted several years of his life to obtain a knowledge of the SHERIFF'S business and duties, as Clerk to the three gentlemen who have successively filled that office, and in that capacity endeavored to render every satisfaction to the public. He hopes his character and conduct, on enquiry, will be found such as to meet the approbation of his fellow citizens, whose support he respectfully solicits at the ensuing election for SHERIFF; should he be successful, he pledges himself to execute the duties of the office with industry, fidelity, and humanity. The public's humble servant, JOHN HUNTER. d September 11

To the Voters of the City and County of Baltimore. GENTLEMEN, HAVING been solicited by a number of my friends in the city and county, to offer myself a candidate for the office of SHERIFF, at the ensuing election, and feeling a consciousness that I possess the necessary qualifications to discharge the duties attached to that office, I now come forward and respectfully solicit your votes and interest at the ensuing election; assuring you, that, if I should become your choice, I shall make every exertion to discharge the duties attached to the office with punctuality, integrity and humanity, as far as may be consistent with the interest of those whom may have the honor to serve. JOHN KERNS. d

TO THE VOTERS OF THE City and County of Baltimore. Henry Trapnall, AT the last Election was placed on the return by the disinterested approbation of his friends and well wishers, and acknowledges with grateful sensibility the obligation he is under for their liberality and humanity excited in his favor—and he again begs leave to offer himself a candidate for the important Office of SHERIFF of Baltimore county, at the next Election held for that purpose—Respectfully soliciting the favor and suffrage of the public generally; and also, a continuation of that friendly disposition so lately manifested towards him, and he pledges himself that, should he be designated as your choice, he will render that satisfaction compatible with the duties required. September 11 d

The schr. James, 4 days from Baltimore, for Charleston, was spoken the 5th of September, in lat. 34, 20, long. 73, 30, all well.

We are requested to state that the piece in our paper of yesterday, holding up B. S. ELDEN as a suitable character for a member of the first branch of the city council, was inserted without his knowledge; that he has never had a thought of offering himself as candidate for that office, and that he is not even eligible as he resides in the precincts. He begs the author of the piece to accept his acknowledgments for the honor intended, and the good opinion expressed of his character.

To the Editor of the American.

SIR, In your paper of Thursday last, a writer under the signature of "Impartial," has undertaken to correct an error in the "Impartial Observer;" but he is imperfectly acquainted with the subject of his communication. He says, "the truth is that Mr. Nicholson did receive a letter from Major B— stating that General Wilkinson had reported that the President had said that neither Mr. Randolph nor Mr. Nicholson, nor any other man of violent temper, should ever receive any appointment from him; or words to that effect."

Your correspondent is misinformed. Mr. Nicholson never did receive such a letter from Major B— or from any other person. Mr. Nicholson never heard a suggestion that the President considered either Mr. Randolph or himself "a man of violent temper," or that he had formed a determination, "never to appoint either of them to office." Had a letter been received, containing such expressions, unconnected with matter of more importance, Mr. Nicholson never could have brought himself to consent to deliver it to the President.

The letter presumed to be referred to contained nothing of this kind—there was not in it the slightest allusion to Mr. Randolph or Mr. Nicholson's temper, or to their appointment to office—these gentlemen were merely mentioned as being connected with, what General Wilkinson was pleased to term, a Jacobin Faction. It was not, however, offered to the perusal of the President on this account, but because it contained information of an interesting nature, relative to the then subsisting differences in Louisiana, which might in their consequences prove injurious to the welfare of the United States, and because it contained expressions, said to have been used by General Wilkinson, which Mr. Nicholson deemed a gross libel on the character of the administration. So little did Mr. Randolph or Mr. Nicholson feel themselves personally implicated, that the letter never was a subject of conversation between them, more than once or twice; although they were probably in habits of as frequent interchange of sentiment, as any other two members of Congress.

Your correspondent is misinformed in another particular—He says "a friend sent an extract from the letter of Major B— to General Wilkinson, who explicitly denied that he had ever heard the President utter such a sentiment, or that he had ever said he did." He must be mistaken—the letter never was out of Mr. Nicholson's possession, except when it was with the President, and it is not believed that the President used it for the purpose of sending an extract to General Wilkinson. A friend of the General's, a member of the senate, it was understood, did write to him on the subject; and his answer was shewn to Mr. Nicholson—It contained, as well as is recollected, very little more than general professions of respect for Mr. Randolph and Mr. Nicholson, and his denial, instead of embracing the contents of the letter, appeared only to apply to some such facts as are stated in the American of Thursday. As his friend had never seen the letter, or heard it read, it is probable that he could not give an accurate account of it.

This statement will shew the absurdity of an insinuation which has been diffused through the public prints, that Mr. Randolph's opposition to two of the leading measures of the last session of Congress, arose from an impression made upon him by the declaration of the President, said to have been contained in this letter. No man who knows him can doubt that every insinuation will prove equally groundless, which has ascribed to that gentleman other motives for his conduct, than the firmest patriotism, guided by the most dignified principles of honor; a consciousness of his own rectitude, blended with an unalterable determination to pursue that course which he believes to be right. CANDOR.

FOR THE AMERICAN. To the Voters of Baltimore County. Six candidates are offered to your consideration as members to the next legislature of this state. In a few days we must determine who of them are the most suitable to fill the station. You will indulge a few sentiments on the subject, from one who feels himself interested that our delegation should be improved, at least preserved as respectable as heretofore.—I shall do this by merely stating the considerations that will influence me (if my present impressions remain unaltered) in giving my vote, and leave them for the reflection of those that may think them worth attention. As there are no impending measures before that body of a constitutional or other nature, calculated to excite general speculation, and induce our choice by the candidate's sentiments thereon, we have more particularly to scrutinize their individual characters and abilities. Local and individual interests will doubtless have its usual influence, in favour of each candidate in some one or other respect; but the generally of the county it is presumed will be found actuated by a desire that our delegates should be of service and an honour to us. It is not in the power of every individual (at least numbers do not take the trouble necessary) to furnish themselves with accurate and disinterested information of the respective merits of persons offered for their suffrage—it is for this reason I send you my mere opinion, founded upon some acquaintance and some observations on the services of those gentlemen. I candidly invite the discussion of the subject, as I am persuaded the public will lose nothing by being better informed.

Captain Tobias E. Stansbury has been long a member of this house, and both, upon the floor and in the chair (which he has filled) has acquitted himself much to the satisfaction of his constituents generally, and of the house itself. There is no person that could appear always more attentive to the particular business of his own immediate county, or more solicitous for their interest than Mr. Stansbury. He is not, it is true, much conversant in classic lore, or talented with the gift of gab, but his abilities for the more necessary duties of a legislator is well tested. His judgment is considered as profound, and integrity unquestioned. The exalted conduct of Mr. S. at the commencement of the last session, indeed, entitles him not only to the confidence, but admiration of his fellow-citizens. Arriving at the seat of government, he found the business of the legislature entirely suspended by petty disputes, respecting a privilege of the chairman. The House a week in session without a speaker—Mr. Stansbury properly censuring such party folly, accepted the seat which he had before filled with honor to himself, and which the other members had pettishly refused to assume, without an unimportant appendage which the equilibrium of parties continued to deny, at the severe expense of the state. Mr. Alexis Lemmon has likewise been many years a member of the house. He is not calculated to make a figure there, (except in corporal size) and has seldom ventured far beyond age and naivety on any discussion—he generally, however, appears anxious for the progress of business, though not eminently calculated to dispatch it himself—and he has this for his recommendation, "that he is a well meaning man, and has been true to the political principles and interests of the people." If he has a fault in distributions, it is penury rather than prodigality. Mr. Harryman has been two sessions in the legislature, in which time he has not introduced himself to any particular notice. His measures have generally coincided passively with those of his colleagues, and his party. I must confess myself less acquainted with this gentleman than either of the other candidates, and for that reason shall not pretend to have assurance of the propriety of my approbation; other than that the general contour of his manners, evinces a man capable of business, and possessed of information.

Mr. Moses Brown was some years since a member, and again offers himself for the assembly.—He was at first introduced into the republican ticket by a meeting of persons little acquainted with his abilities or perhaps his person, to whom he was suggested, probably, by the popularity of his deceased brother, and was supported, rather than divide the political interest, which was at that time, warmly contested by a federal ticket. Experiments of this nature are often beneficial, as they bring into notice abilities that would otherwise have remained unnoticed—it must, however, in its very nature, often fail in that salutary effect. Such was the case with Mr. B. he evinced no abilities for the station to which he was particularly elevated; no turn for business of a public nature whatever—his information appears exactly contracted, without the talent to express what he happens to know to any tolerable advantage, even in conversation; therefore his judgment is passively mechanical instead of active; and, indeed he possesses as few collective ideas as any man that could pretend to the office of a statesman, without any compensatory possession to recommend him to our votes. Mr. Brown, it was always understood, said nothing and did nothing in the house; we might as well have no member.

Mr. Amos Ogden, who last year filled the place of Mr. Brown, in the legislature, appears to be the very extreme reverse. If the people turned the former gentleman out for inactivity, in my humble opinion, they rushed into the opposite error by electing Mr. O. in his place. If Mr. Brown had not information enough to speak, Mr. Ogden had not sense enough to hold his tongue. It is a sober fact, that his oratory became the habitual derision of his fatigued hearers; whilst it was confined too, to observations that every person of common understanding must have known as well, for better than
