DETAILS

OF THE COMBAT OF DIRSCHAU, GAINED BY THE POLISH TROOPS OVER THE PRUSSIAN.

Warsaw, March 9.

We have just been informed of the details of the action at Dirschau, in which General Dabrowski has made himself master of all the enemy's positions, and repulsed them as far as Dantzick.

The enemy daily appeared before the cantonments of Mews and its environs, disturbing the left flank of Dabrowski, who, in consequence, resolved to make an attack with his whole corps, and to drive the enemy towards Dantzick.

The enemy's principal points were Dirschau, Muhlbank and Schoeneck. General Menard was with his division in the neighborhood of Pepelin, and has occupied Stargardt with a regiment of the troops of Baden; one battalion of Polish infantry, the legion of the north, and 2 pieces of cannon.

Gen. Dabrowski was with his division at Mews and its environs, his head quarters at Grieblin, commanded by his son, Col. Dabrowski, composed of his regiment of national cavalry, two pieces of cannon, and four companies of Chasseurs. On the morning of the 23d of February, the whole corps put itself in motion. General Menard had orders to occupy Schoeneck with the detachment of his division by the left of Siaga-dt to Dirschau, and then to turn to the left to cover the high road to Dantzick. The van guard of Gen. Menard, commanded by general Puthod, was composed of two Polish battalions, the cavalry of Baden, of two howitzers, 3 one piece of cannon. The van guard was reinforced by the 5th regiment of Polish infantry, commanded by Gen. Niemcewicz. As soon as Gen. Menard, whose division formed the left of the whole, had perceived that the enemy was marching from Lau-na towards Dirschau he sent his vanguard to meet them. It was also reinforced by a Polish regiment of cavalry. General Menard took his position near Dirschau.

The van guard of Dabrowski attacked the enemy, overthrew them, and forced them, in spite of their heavy fire of artillery and musketry to return to the suburbs. Being there advantageously posted in the houses, the enemy opposed our approach vigorously; it was necessary to drive them from thence. Col. Kunkel, with some companies of grenadiers & Chasseurs of the 1st Polish regiment of infantry, attacked the suburbs on the other side of the Vistula, made 30 prisoners, & forced the enemy to withdraw themselves into the place. Major Niemcewicz with the first battalion of the 5th regiment of infantry, drew also near that side in spite of the broken ground extremely difficult to pass, & attacked the enemy with the utmost vigour. The remainder of the vanguard of Gen. Niemcewicz, where General Dabrowski was himself, attacked the suburbs of Dantzick, on the other side, defended by the enemy's artillery, & the major part of the infantry; but the enemy was soon forced to retire to the city.

The enemy seeing itself pursued with unexpected intensity, fled to the granaries and houses on the outside of the gates. Thus shut up in the town, relying on the succours expected by way of Muhlbank; they defended themselves with desperation. The second battalion of the 5th regiment of infantry, commanded by its colonel, prince Sulkowski, sustained a terrible fire with the utmost sang froid, and gained ground towards the gates. Four cannon and two howitzers of French Polish artillery, under the orders of the brave Lieutenant of artillery, Claretot, were on the city; he approached the gates with two of his pieces and made a breach. After a six hours obstinate combat, the enemy's artillery was obliged to leave its fire.

The young prince Sulkowski, disregarding the two contusions he had received, followed by Col. Czajczewski at the head of his second battalion and a battalion of the infantry of Baden, commanded by Major Brucke, assaulted the said gate of Dantzick, and was the first that entered it. All was overturned, all were obliged to yield to the impetuosity of our young soldiers.

At the same time, Col. Sierawski, at the head of the 3rd battalion of infantry, and that of Col. Fisher, entered the city by the gates of the Vistula. The streets were covered with the dead and wounded. The enemy have lost above 200 men killed and 200 wounded; 1 major, 8 captains, 10 lieutenants, 600 prisoners and 3 pieces of cannon. Besides this advantage we have another of more consideration, that the enemy has learned to respect the young Poles, who, having been formed but six weeks ago, have given proofs of valour equal to any of the oldest soldiers.

On our side we have lost Lieut. Berzononi, 30 killed and 60 wounded, among whom are 12 officers. Gen. Niemcewicz, during the six hours combat, constantly kept at the head of the vanguard exposed to grape shot; gave the example of courage, exciting the soldiers to the combat. Col. Mehevski had his horse killed under him, and was himself wounded. The same happened to Col. Hauke and Weiffendorf. Col. Dabrowski of the national cavalry, son of the general, received a musket ball through the arm at the side of his father. The father's feelings had to yield to that of the general. It was not till the end of the combat that he enquired after the situation of his son. The general had 6 horses killed under him, and was wounded in the thigh.

A party of Prussians, after climbing over the walls of the city to save themselves by crossing the Vistula on the ice, but the ice being too weak, they found their deaths in the stream. The corps of Gen. Dabrowski has defeated masters of the strong positions of Dirschau, Muhlbank and Schoeneck. The enemy was routed at all points, and has retired to Dantzick.

The Norfolk Herald gives an animated description of the splendid celebration of the Great Jubilee at James-Town; and says "It was a spectacle which Gods might look down upon and envy!" The following was the order of procession:

The dawn was announced by a discharge of cannon from the shore, and some tunes from an excellent band of music, which was returned from all the vessels stationed off the island that were mounted with guns—About 11 o'clock a procession in the following order was formed:

The band of music playing "Boyne Water." The Bishop of Virginia, accompanied by the Orators of the day. The old Inhabitants of James Town. The Committees from Norfolk, Petersburg, Williamsburg, and other towns. The Ladies, two and two. The Citizens from Norfolk. The Citizens from Petersburg. The Citizens from Williamsburg. The Citizens from James City and the adjacent counties. Captain Nefell's Company of artillery. Six Citizens bearing a cannon ball weighing 500 weight & brought into Virginia by Captain Newport.

On the trial of the ship Fanny and Almira, Mix, captured on her passage from Bordeaux to this port by his Britannic Majesty's ship of war Cambrian, the judge of the vice admiralty court at Halifax condemned as good and lawful prize all that part of the cargo which belonged to Mr. James Vidolot of this city, who was a shipper on board. Captain Mix, in his answer to the usual interrogatories, gave it as his opinion that it was French property, because it was shipped by a Frenchman, consign- ed to a man with a French name, and because to his knowledge it is not unusual for French property to be smuggled into the United States in that manner!!

The said Captain Elijah Mix, also declared, that if the (the Fanny and Almira) had arrived late at her destined port, the part he has stated to belong to Daniel Green and Ebenzer Town- send would have immediately become their property. With regard to the remainder of the cargo it would have been delivered to the owners or their order, but whose property it would become he does not know, any further than that he believes it is and would become French property.

American, AND Commercial Daily Advertiser.

SATURDAY, MAY 23, 1807.

A gentleman has put into our possession a mutilated list of the Royal Navy of England in the year 1733, and Steel's List of the same for the year 1807. By these documents we are enabled to estimate in some measure the increase of the British Navy for a period of 84 years. The first mentioned document states, that in 1733, England had

7 first rates of 100 guns each. 13 second do. of 90 do. [The copy is here a fictive till it comes to the sixth rate]

25 sixth rates, of 20 and 24 guns each. 4 fire ships, of 8 guns each. 3 bombs, of 6 guns each. 14 yatches, 10 sloops, 11 hoys, 2 smacks, 1 store-ship, and 8 hulks

Allowing to each of the intermediate rates (a statement of which, from loss of leaves, the list does not contain) between the second and sixth, twenty-five ships, the whole number of the Royal Navy of England, great and small, in the year 1733, would have amounted to 173 vessels.

Turning to Steel's List for 1807, we find that Great Britain has of all kinds of vessels of war for this year,

At sea 579 In port and fitting 148 Guard ships 10 Otherwise employed 27

Total in commission 764 In ordinary 184 Building 115

Total 1061 Deduct the number in 1723 173

Increase in 84 years 888

This great increase has been occasioned in some measure by building new vessels, and in a great degree by captures from the enemies of Great-Britain, after many bloody naval wars. So much, indeed, is this latter part the case, that France, Spain, Holland, or any other European power have scarcely any navy at all. The respectable fleets which they have from time to time equipped to defend their commerce have fallen a sacrifice to the superior prowess of the English on the ocean, and served eventually to swell the list of the Royal Navy to its present enormous extent.

It might be worth a man's while to enquire, if he had leisure to do it, whether this enormous growth of naval power has added any thing to the happiness of the people of that nation which furnishes the means of its existence? That it has been hostile to the repose of nations, we have ample proof in the page of common history; and that it has made the high-seas, which Nature intended to be free to all mankind, a road dangerous to be travelled by the citizens of peaceable nations, the repeated outrages on neutral commerce clearly demonstrate. What Bonaparte has done and is doing on the land, the British have already done on the ocean; and whilst her ministers are condemning the Emperor of the French for his inordinate ambition and cruel devastations, they forget, or wish to conceal that Great Britain has usurped the empire of the seas, and lords it over commerce with as high a hand as he has exercised his authority over the princes and people of continental Europe.

By Particular Request OF a number of Ladies and Gentlemen, will be exhibited against a Key'd Violin

C. VELTENAIR respectfully informs the Public that he will again give a CONCERT on this newly invented Instrument, THIS EVENING, the 23d of May. Musical amateurs will find themselves both surpris'd and delighted at the wonderful properties of this extraordinary invention. The exhibition will take place at Mr. Myer's Hotel, in Market-street, at 7 o'clock.

As the making of money by his exhibition, is not so much the object of C. Veltenair, as the rendering the powers of the Key'd Violin well known, the price of admission is reduced to 50 cents. Tickets of a Mission to be had at the bar. Those who are desirous of examining this curious instrument, will please to call between the hours of 11 and 1, and 3 and 5. May 23 24t
