PHILADELPHIA, May 30.

FROM THE HAYTI GAZETTE.

ACTS OF THE SENATE

Extracted from the Register of the Deliberations of the Senate, and of the sitting of the 9th of March 1807, 4th year of Independence.

Having duly deliberated on the subject, it was unanimously resolved to proceed to the election of a new President, and that no delay could be admitted.

The votes being collected, it appeared that, out of 16 Members General Petition, Senator, and 13 votes. General Gerin, Magloire Ambroise, and Cayou Senators obtained each one vote.

General Petition was consequently proclaimed President of Hayti.

Signed, Barlatec, President. Charles Daguilhe, and J. L. Depa-Mutina, Secretaries.

The Senate assembled to the number prescribed by the 28th Article:

A Member observed that since the revolt of Henry Christophe, nominated President of Hayti by the Constituent Assembly in the sitting of the 25th December, 1806, the Presidency was vacant, and that the public welfare imperiously called for the election of a new President, conformably to the 10th and 12th Article of the Constitution.

Ordered, the reading of the business of the last Session, which was adopted.

The President announced to the Senate that General Petition, Senator, nominated in the sitting of the 9th of March, President of Hayti, was about to enter the hall of the Assembly to take the Oath prescribed by the Constitution.

At the same instant a Salute of artillery was heard, and the President of Hayti was announced, the Senate decreed that its Members should receive him sitting, and covered. The President of Hayti appeared, preceded by the Secretary of State, Generals Bazelaïs and Wagnac, and a great number of civil and military officers.

Mr. Lewis, an officer of the American navy was in the Suite.

The President of Hayti traversed the hall to the found of musical instruments, and appeared at the bar, where a chair was prepared to receive him. The President of the Senate also ordered suitable places for the Secretary of State, Generals Bazelaïs and Wagnac, and Mr. Lewis.

He then addressed the President of Hayti in the following words:

Citizen General, The Senate being aware of the necessity of organizing the government, has proceeded, in its sitting of yesterday, to the nomination of the President of Hayti. The votes of its members have been in your favor; and you have been proclaimed President of the Haytian Republic.

The Senate, in elevating you to be first magistrate of the State, conceive they have rendered public homage to your virtues and to the republican sentiments, which have hitherto characterized you. Entrusted with the execution of the laws and the direction of the armed force, you will become an object of emulation to all those of your fellow citizens, who follow you in your career. Your attachment to the Republic, your submission to the laws, and your zeal in executing them, are the powerful motives which have determined the legislative corps, to place you at the head of the government and of the armed force. May the Gods preserve in you that happy character with which you are gifted by nature, and ever render you the object of public admiration.

Bear ever in mind, President, that the welfare of the Republic depends on the harmony which ought to subsist between the executive power and the legislative body. To destroy it would be dangerous to the State by exposing it to divisions. When the government is organized, the political crisis must cease.

The President of Hayti standing and uncovered, answered to the following effect:

Ranked by your choice to be first magistrate of the State; become, in some sort, the depositary of the happiness and of the destiny of our country. I have the honor of declaring to you that I should be alarmed at the extent of the obligations you impose on me, if I were not certain of finding in your enlightened minds, in your wisdom, and in your energy all the resources of which I stand in need. This idea, Senators, is sufficient for me; and, accepting with confidence the new mission with which you honor me, my heart will pronounce in the Senate the oath which the Constitution prescribes to the President of Hayti:

"I swear to fulfil faithfully the office of President of Hayti, and to maintain, with all my might, the Constitution."

"May the arms confided in the people for the defence of liberty be directed against my breast, if ever I conceive the audacious and impious project of attempting to violate their rights; if ever I forget that, after having given my aid to the destruction of the tyrant whose existence was a reproach to nature, and after having afflicted to proscribe another, who by his blind ambition lighted up among us the flames of civil war, that I have been elevated to the Presidency of Hayti."

The President of the Senate then invited the President of Hayti to take his place on the right, which was done.

The music then struck up, On peut-on être mieux ou sein de sa famille. A great number of citizens, amongst whom were remarked several foreign merchants, occupied the galleries. Joy was visible on every countenance.

A member proposed that the speech of the President of the Senate, as well as that of the President of Hayti should be entered on the minutes of the sitting, and printed, which was unanimously agreed to.

Another member proposed, that in consideration of the bad state of health of the President of Hayti, the sitting should be broken up. This proposition being adopted, the President adjourned the session. (Signed) J. L. BARLATER, President. CH. DAGUILHE, J. L. DEPA-MEDINA, } secs.

Port-au Prince, March 10, 1807. Extract from the Sitting of the Senate, of the 12th of March, 1807.

The Senate, on the proposition of its members, declare that there are matters of urgency, and decree as follows:

To the President alone belongs the right of presenting to the Senate, persons to be employed in civil and military capacities.

Art. I. The right of transacting political foreign affairs, and carrying on negotiations is temporarily vested in the President of Hayti.

Art. II. The President of Hayti, may make, sign, or cause to be signed, with foreign powers, any treaty of alliance or commerce, and generally any agreement that he shall judge necessary to the welfare of the State.

Art. III. In case any secret articles should enter into a treaty, they shall not set aside the principal ones.

Art. IV. No treaty is effective, unless examined and ratified by the Senate.

Signed as above.

"Where can we be better than in the bosom of our family?"—A delightful French air, which speaks almost as forcibly to the heart of every true Frenchman, as the celebrated Rancho des Vaubés does to the wandering Swiss.—T. mas.

MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1807.

Died, on Wednesday evening last, in the 43d year of his age, Mr. William McCormick, of the cutter of the City.

A sincere republican—an honest, industrious and useful citizen—justly esteemed by those who knew him, and deservingly regretted as a public and private loss to society. He left his native country (Ireland) thro' his love of civil liberty, and always in his adopted country, proved himself deserving of its enjoyments.

To the Public.

Not doubting but the public are well aware at whom the false, malicious and rashly allusion was aimed at (and the object it is intended for), in a publication in Saturday's Evening Post, under the head of "Mechanics' Bank." I feel it my duty, as a friend to truth and order, to submit a few remarks to the public, relative thereto, and conclude with a few observations respecting a creature not worth the notice of any stockholder in the Mechanics' Bank, or any other character possessing feelings of honor, respect or sacred truth. It is true, as stated, that a prize of 2,500 dollars was drawn by some persons residing in the country, in the Evangelical Church Lottery; those persons, in consequence of a dispute amongst them, came to this city with a positive determination to make sale of their ticket;—this was accordingly mentioned to the board of managers of said lottery, and the gentleman alluded to was appointed by them to negotiate for the purchase of the said ticket, and that for the benefit of the church, which he accordingly did without the personal involvement of the said lottery.

I appeal to my fellow citizens whether such conduct merited the mean and ungentlemanly remarks of avarice, indeliberation or ignorance. I appeal again, whether such a publication, at the hour of an approaching election, could proceed from a gentleman, or any character possessing common understanding, or retaining a temporary spark of human feeling, could have the presumption thus publicly to come forward, disregarding his interest, his respectability or the feelings of his fellow citizens, to assail a gentleman whose character is too well understood by his fellow citizens to be in any respect biased by such unnecessary nonse which computes the entire publication.

Sure I am that he will be disappointed in his object, although the assiduous fish was made at this late hour.

A CARD.

A communication having appeared on Saturday last, in a paper called the "Spectacles" intimating that Mrs. Wilnot had tendered her services during the remainder of the season, but which had been rejected from the Managers having set her face against her. Mrs. W. considers it necessary to state that however she may feel obliged to the writer for the compliments he is pleased to pay her, it is with regret she perceives that they have been made the vehicle of unjust censure to others, and begs leave that they will publicly correct the misstatements which have been made. That Mrs. W. would have been proud to have appeared again before the Baltimore audience, it would be affectation to deny; but understanding on her arrival that the benefits had begun, she knew that the established rule of the Theatre prevented a adventitious aid during their continuance; no application there fore whatever was made, and she stays here a few days only on her way to Philadelphia, where she remains till the commencement of the Charleston season calls her to her engagement there.

It will, therefore, appear evident from the above statement, that the assertions against Mrs. W. of the theatre are unfounded, as opposition could not exist where application had not been made; nor does Mrs. Wilnot believe the lady alluded to would pay so ill a compliment to her own merit as to fear the talents of another, and regrets that such an idea should ever have been entertained.
