LONDON, September 3.

Extras of a Letter from the Hague, dated August 24.

"Count Lowendarl has put every method in practice in order to succeed in the taking Bergen-op-Zeom; amongst the zest ac has not omitted unaking also of corruption, which on many occasions has served the bad purposes of the court of France. We are affured that a few days ago a captain came to acquaint General Cronstrom, that he had been certainly informed that the besiegers would, the night following, at a certain hour, and with to many troops, attack such a part of the counterfearpe. After having inform'd his excellence of all the circumitances, which he said had come to his knowlege by means of a fpy whom he had employed, he asked that he might have the honour of defending the post threatned. The grantwered anat nothing was more just than his request. officer, whole turn it was to command that night in the place that was to be attacked, hearing of what had passed, came to acquaint the general that he thought himfelf but ill used, in being deprived of the opportunity of ugnalizing himself, and that The general thought there in short it was doing aim injustice. was reason in what he alleges, and to prevent a misundersanding between the two captains, he cassed them to draw lots for the command, which favoured a m whose turn it was to mount guard. The general informed nim of every thing, and caused a detachment to advance to tecond him. The best gers made a detachment to advance to fecona him. the attack at the hour, and in the place fore: old, and were received as if they had been expected, and confequently obliged to take to their heels, crying Out morbleu, nous sommes encore tra is. Zounds! we are again beiray'd. This again plainly shews, that this is not the only time they had made use of the same expedient, and without success. Our generals were in he manner betrayed in the attack upon Wou, which was fo well regulated a scene, that in case it had not been by treachery discovered, it would infallibly have oc. assened the raising the siege. An Extrall of a Letter from a French Paruzan. at the Hague, dated Sepiember 8, 1747 The Dake d'Ayen, who is commonly fall of drollerly and humour, and who has ad the Dutch Gazettes lent him, very often entertains the French king with reading them to him. After having received one, which gave an account of many ad vantages gained by the garrifon of Bergen op zoom over the befiegers, of the g eat pienty they enjoy in that city, and of the difficulties Count Lowendahi had to escounter, and the feareity that there was of all necessaries in his army; he gravely faid at the king's table, before all the Generals, I am very forry for poor Count Lowendahl. His Majerty looking a: him carnestly, said, Why are you forry for hm? Does he want People? No, Sir, answered the Duke, he has too many by half. How is that, replied the King, taughing? However, if it is fo, I will give you his command, and 10,000 men more, provided that you will engage to take Bergen op 200m by the 15th of September, that I may then be at leiture to return to To which the Duke replied, Notwithstanding the Incli-Paris. nation I have to acquire glory, I cannot accept of the offer, Decause Ishould ful in the attempt, as will plainly appear by these papers: At the same time taking out of his pocket the Hague Gazette, with some others, he afterwards went on and faid, You will there see that the army of M. Lowendahl wants bread, beer, and even water. The Gazettes were actually read, at which the King and the Lords at table were very much diverted; and then faid, If this is true that my troops want neceffaries, they will acquire great glory in taking Bergen op zoom, whilst the enemy never goes to fight without their bellies full of beer, wine and geneva.

From the DAILY ADVERTISER, August 17, 1747

To the worthy Inbabitante of the City and Liberty of Westmin-

Gentlemen, Aving been at sea, when you did me the honour to elect me one of your representatives in parliament for this honourable city, which prevented the paying my acknow-legement to you fooner, for fo great a favour: Permit me now to do it, and to return you my fincereft thanks for this distinguish'd mark of your regard; and to assure you, that I shall make it my study to merit your good opinion, by discharging the important trust you have been pleased to repose in me; in fuch manner as will be most conducive to the true interest of my country in general, and of this great city in particular. Gentlemen,

Your mest faithful, And obedient bumble Sorwant, P. WARREN.

We hear that it willbeproposed in the ensuing feffich of preliament; that all tickets for admitting persons into plays, ore ra, affemblies, masquerades, balls, and all other diversor, shall be printed upon double sixpenny stamps; that such as in in easy and affluent circumstances, may more effectually contibute to the fervice of the public; and that those who incounce. rately waite their fortunes in an idle and prodigal pursuit of pleasure, may by this means be obliged to co something forth b nefic of posterity, of which hey are so unmindful in other to It is also said, that a farther duty will be laid upon cards and dice, and that other influments of luxury will it taxed; which is certainly far more re-fonable than impoing a ny new duties on t e necessaries of life.

Last Friday an honest farmer, within a mile of Shrewfour, finding a neighbouring 'squire in too close conjunction with it wite, took care to feed him home disabled from doing the lite kind office for the future; but 'tis hoped, that with a litte in fruction, he may be qualified for a good treble for the opera-

By a gentleman who lived some time at Bergen op zoom se are informed, that in the church, which is demolified, there Was a fine painted window, which Lewi XIV. once offered 80 millions of florins for, and which is now thatter'd to pieces. A trench florin is 11.6d.

One thousand informations, it is faid, are ordered to be tried b fore the commissioners of excise, again & persons retailing in rituous liquors without a license

tā

ar

th

Z

ric

Ċr.

cài

20

rela

32

Wſ

for

be

W¢ ha

W:

the

if ab.

2b

2 (

qо

ро

fic lat

ш

Pr

he

CO

26

ń

Letters from Hanover mention, that the levies continue is that electorate with fresh vigour, lince the five regiments let us for the Low Countries, in order to have fresh supplies upon a ny emerge cy.

S. pt. 8. The last letters from Liege, dated ehe 5th infizit, fay, they were execulively alarmed at the French king's heat quarters, at the bold attempt of a party of Huslars, who his carried of an entire guard from Gangeibeg, mar Tongje, afe killing the efficer who commanded in chief, who refused to the mic or part with his arms.

We have accounts from feveral places, of most drack! florms of thunder and lightning during the late fulry weather; but, what is more uncommon, a column of water fell in Burguner during one of the florms, which did great damage at Noy, where the best Burgundy wine grows, and killed twelve or filter perfons.

Private letters from Holland, of good authority, say, that n English general, who commanded a body of troops of the tent nation near Hulft, has exerted himself with great vigour, to precare sufficient evidence against G. ... 1 R .---, Governor of us Dutch fortresses, for endeavouring treacherously to put the tors into the possession of the French, with 3000 English troops us The same advices add, that a speedy enquiry will be madeira the conduct of those governments, who scandalously deliveredy so many fortifications, almost without any refissance. Guard Cronstrom is nominated president of that court

General Huke fet out this day for the Ailied army.

The lords of the admiralty have appointed Cip. Greary to be commander of the Culloden, a new 74 gin 67, which was launched yesterday at Deptsord: She is estemedic compleatest built ship of that force in the royal navy. The effigy of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberlards curiously carved and gift at her stein, in m mory of the but gained over the rebels at Cullodn.

On Friday the following mea of war failed from Plynoni to the westward, under the command of rear admiral chambes viz. the Princels Louisa, Nottingham, Defiance, Tilbury, 147

Romney, Oxford, Dover, and Specowell floop. CHARLES-TOWN, (S. Carolina) October 26. By Capt. Richard Stiles, who arrived here a lew oays ago int New-Providence, we hear, that on the second inflant, a tends hurricane was felt there, that lasted about 16 hours, in which a worfels were drove ashore, but 20 of them may be got off sgall that the small galley, mentioned in a former paper to be uliq from the French by a small privateer belong g to, and comanded by Capt. Richard Thomson of that island, having to fitted out by the faid Thompson, had taken and brought in the a large Spanish ship, with a considerable quantity of Fisher a valuable cargo, supposed to be worth 50,000 l. sterling: This there have been several other prizes brought in there, and them five English vello's retaken, one of them brigt from verpoole, and a fnow from Jamaica for Philadelphia, which is will be loft; the 3 others Capt. S yles knows not.

By a vessel from Frederica, we hear, that one of the printies belonging to that place, has retaken Capt. Campbeli's school or Port Royal, and had an engagement, about 3 wicks it with a Spanish privateer brigt, of ib . iage guns, that his