They Walked With Christ

JAMES Son of Alphaeus

"And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him . . . Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the son of Alphaeus . . ."

—Mark III:14,18

No name in the New Testament has caused quite so much confusion as that of James.

The reason is that in different places we read variously of James the son of Alphaeus, James the brother of the Lord; and of James the Less.

Are all these one and the same person? Catholic scholars for the most part say yes. Many Protestant authorities agree with them.

But then another question arises. What is meant by the designation, "brother of the Lord?"

Catholic interpreters assert that the Greek word, "adelphos," used in this reference, can mean step-brother or even a near relative.

Therefore, they argue, James was not the brother of Jesus in the literal sense—that is, he was not the son of Mary, the Virgin. It is more likely, they contend, that he was the son of the Virgin's sister, and therefore a cousin of Jesus.

In the early Church, the Greek fathers believed him to be the son of Joseph by a first marriage. Latin writers of the same period, however, all regarded James as the cousin of Jesus, since they taught that Mary remained a virgin all her life.

Whatever his exact relation to Jesus, James held a position of great respect among the Apostles.

It is said that after the martyrdom of St. Stephen, the other Apostles chose James to preside over affairs of the church in Jerusalem. Hence, he is sometimes referred to as the Bishop of Jerusalem.

According to the historian Hegesippus, who lived toward the end of the second century, James made a public declaration of his faith from one of the Temple ramparts, and was hurled to the ground by angry scribes and Pharisees. He was not killed by the fall, so his attackers then stoned him. As he was being killed, so the account goes, he called upon God to forgive his murderers.

They Walked With Christ

HEROD

"Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead."

—Luke IX.7

When Pilate heard that Jesus was from Galilee, which came under the jurisdiction of Herod Antipas, he sent Him to Herod to be tried.

But the tetrarch, who already had the beheading of John the Baptist on his conscience, wanted nothing more to do with prophets, and sent Jesus back to Pilate.

Both Biblical and secular history leave no doubt as to Herod's wicked character.

He was a son of Herod the Great by one of the latter's five wives, Cleopatra, a native of Jerusalem. Reared amidst the intrigue of a corrupt court, he began his ruthless career at 17, when Augusta Caesar gave him as his share of his father's estate, the greater portion of Galilee.

When Tiberius Caesar became Emperor, Herod journeyed to Rome, where he sought to ingratiate himself with the ruler by offering his services as an informer, spying upon his own brothers, as well as upon Roman officials in Judea.

Although he was already married to the daughter of the Arabian king Aretas, during his voyage to Rome, he fell in love with Herodias, his niece by one brother, and the wife of another, and persuaded her, together with her daughter, to accompany him back to Galilee upon his return.

His first wife heard of this agreement even before he returned, and escaped to her father's court. The Arabian king then made war upon Herod Antipas, and defeated him.

When John the Baptist also condemned Antipas for his incestuous union, Herodias persuaded the tetrarch to have John imprisoned, then, through her daughter, to have him beheaded.

After the death of Tiberias, Herod Antipas was sentenced to banishment by the new Emperor, Caligula, who had given a ready ear to accusations against Antipas, brought to Rome by the tetrarch's nephew, Agrippa Herod.

The manner of his death is not known, but the ancient Jewish historian, Josephus, indicates that he spent his last days in Spain.

He had ruled over Galilee for 43 years.

They Walked With Christ

JOSEPH of Arimathaea

"And, behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counseller; and he was a good man, and a just: (The same had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Arimathaea, a city of the Jews . . ."

—Luke XXIII:50,51

Joseph, like Nicodemus, another member of the Jewish Great Council or Sanhedrin, was a secret disciple of Jesus.

St. Luke calls him a good and just man, who refused to consent to the verdict of the Sanhedrin when they condemned Jesus.

Although he may not have openly challenged the verdict, he did show more courage than the Nazarene's own disciples when, on the very evening of the Crucifixion, he "went boldly unto Pilate and craved the body of Jesus."

Pilate was surprised to learn that Jesus was already dead. Crucified men often lingered in agony on the cross for two days. The Procurator called in the centurion who had been in charge of the execution for a report. Learning that Jesus had indeed expired on the Cross, he gave Joseph permission to take down His body.

Papini points out that Pilate thus disregarded a Roman custom of the day, according to which Roman officers who were in charge of executions could collect a fee from families or friends of the crucified for delivery of the body.

Josephus and Nicodemus, attended by Mary Magdalene and probably the other two Marys, took the body of Jesus to a garden in which the wealthy Joseph had had a sepulchre for himself hewn in a rock.

There the sacred body was prepared for burial: washed, sprinkled with spices, wrapped in a linen shroud, and a napkin placed over the face.

Then, by the eerie, flickering light of torches, the white-shrouded body was laid in the tomb and a great rock rolled against the opening to seal it up.

Here in the chill blackness of death He was to remain until the dawn of Easter, when from the dark night of man's pit-world the radiance of Resurrection rolled aside the stone and flooded the world with the light of immortality.
