Apparently, the groundhog is not alone in its ability to bring on a prolonged spell of bad weather.

It would be just like those ignorant Porto Ricans to be still in doubt whether they are afloat or ashore.

Another detachment of Boers is said to have surrendered, and still the number of fighting burghers does not appear to diminish.

The Nebraska man who has discovered that he is his own brother-in-law has no chance to find fault with his wife's relations.

The Boer who kept a live lyddite shell in the house as a memento of an argument shared the fate of the individual who didn't know it was loaded.

Perhaps the plainest part of the Supreme Court decision in the Porto Rican cases is the enunciation of the principle that the tariff follows the flag.

Astronomy has now discovered snow and ice on the moon. Astronomy should keep such secrets or the fee-trust will take possession of Miss Luna.

Not less than 700 couples were married in Paris last Sunday. American cities appear interested only in breaking the record for divorces.

For the benefit of the Administration organs which persist in constraining the opinions in their favor, the United States Supreme Court should now decide what their decisions mean.

The weather seems to experience some difficulty in breaking away from cool breezes and drenching rains. It is to be hoped that there will be no getting even later on by an excess of heat.

Mr. Arthur P. Gorman, Jr., is a candidate for the House of Delegates from Howard county. If Arthur P., Jr., is a chip of the old block—and it is believed that he is—he ought to "get there."

A lawyer in a Pennsylvania court grew so warm in his argument that a number of matches in his pocket were ignited, set fire to his coat and unwittingly he presented himself to the court literally in a blaze of effluence.

The "Order of Don't Knocks" is the latest candidate for public favor in the way of fraternal societies. In the constitution "knock" is defined as "the deplorable habit of speaking ill of our fellows," and another section binds the members to observe the Golden Rule. When the "Order of Don't Knocks" becomes the whole world and its taints are strictly observed, the millennium will have arrived. In the meantime, success to the "Don't Knocks," may their tribe increase!

People who have left the office door open all through the winter are now getting themselves into trim to shut it, and will be perfect in the habit about the time when the summer heat is well under way.

There appears to be no doubt that Ching was the guiding spirit of S. A. Abell et al. in the Southern Maryland enumeration frauds, and the devious trail of the census manipulation leads plainly from Ching to Mudd.

Somebody has figured it out from the records that the average age of man has increased seven and a half years during the past century, and this notwithstanding the discovery of the germ theory, appendicitis, etc., and the remarkable vogue of the faith curists.

In a town in New York the police were asked to stop base ball on Sunday. The advocates of the diamond promptly demanded that in case their favorite pastime was checked, that golf should also be stopped, and now the authorities are called on to decide the relative moral influences of the great Scotch and the great American games.

Kentucky cannot offer any sea serpents, but she puts in a modest claim to distinction by reporting that a school of fish in a river which carried off the refuse of a distillery got intoxicated on the combination of river water and refuse. The only improbable feature of the story is that any animate creature in Kentucky should take water.

The announcement that a German scientist has discovered a method of demitoxicizing tobacco is absurd. Nearly every German scientist is himself a smoker, and knows that tobacco without nicotine would not be tobacco. We might as well expect a Kentuckian to advertise a whiskey from which the intoxicating qualities had been extracted.

The majority had forgotten the responsibility of the sun-spots for about almost everything that happens, but an English scientist is bringing the solar scapegoat into popular remembrance again. It seems the sun is getting economic of its spots, and hence the style of weather we have been enjoying, with the further prospect of a nice, cool summer. With more activity and generosity in its spots will come greater heat and madness and suicides and excitements of all kinds. As the irrevocable would probably sum up the scientific explanation, when the sun gets spotty man is "dotty."
