

Your Committee further report, that they have also examined the proceedings and documents of the said Treasurer, for the same time, in reference to the Free Schools' Fund and Sinking Fund, and they find, from an account settled by the Committee of Claims of the present General Assembly, to 1st December 1851, that there then remained in the Treasury, to the credit of the Free Schools' Fund and Sinking Fund, a balance of forty-two thousand nine hundred and forty-seven dollars and ninety-five cents, in cash, ($42,947.95.)

That it appears to your Committee, by the accounts of the said Treasurer, that he received, from the said 1st December 1851, to the 24th February 1852, thirty-two thousand five hundred and thirty-two dollars and eighty-four cents, (32,532.84,) viz :

On account of
The Sinking Fund,	-	-	-	-	$26,614 73
The Free Schools' Fund,	-	-	-	-	5,918 11
					$32,532 84

That it appears to your Committee, the said Treasurer disbursed in the same time, twelve thousand eight hundred and forty-three dollars and two cents, (12,843.02,) viz :

On account of
The Sinking Fund,	-	-	-	-	$ 381 00
The Free Schools' Fund,	-	-	-	-	12,462 02
					$12,843 02

And for all of these payments, too, he has presented to your Committee satisfactory vouchers and receipts.

That it appears to your Committee, there remained in the Treasury, on the said 24th of February 1852, to the credit of the said Funds, as particularly set forth in the accompanying account current, a balance of sixty-two thousand six hundred and thirty-seven dollars and seventy-seven cents, in cash, ($62,637.77,) and this sum, too, they find duly paid over to his successor, James S. Owens, Esquire.
