What Can a Woman Do?

"The women of France will always be associated in my mind with one woman, a them I can at the entrance of one of the Metro stations in Paris at the beof the war. She was bidding farewell to her soldier sea. There was a work of codesces to her eyes, but no besitation, and she was conting bravely as she kind him first on one cheek, then on the other, and gave him a loving little pat on the arm. The was still smiling as he turned to wave a last adjeu from the bottom of the steps. but I never beard such sobe as shook her slender body, once he was out of sight. had stopped to inquire the way to the American Consulate; the man to whom I spoke did not know. The woman overheard my question and the response, and even in that moment of intense grief, with that divine spirit of self-forgetfulness which was characteristic of the Fre, ch people those days, and still is, I believe, she dried her eyes on the corner of her apron, and gave me the directions. We talked a moment; he was you volunteer for service? It is not only that the Government and the big business concerns engaged in war work must have trained office workers to take the place of men who are "over there," but there is a vast volume of extra work incidental to the war and absolutely necessary to VICTORY. The demand for secretaries, stenographers, bookkeepers, typists, cashiers and clerks extends to every branch of commercial activity—to the railroads banks, business and professional offices, as well as to the great industrial plants. Salaries have never been so high, nor opportunities so great, but aside from any question of personal aggrandizement, it is your patriotic duty. Understand the work must be done if we are not going to fail in the great crisis. What can a woman do? It has been proved she can do almost anything a man
