And then remember, sou, that the world is older than you are by several years; that for thousands of years it has been so full of smarter and better young men than yourself that their feet stuck out of the dormer windows, that when they died the old globe went whirling on, and not one man in ten million went to the funeral or even heard of his death. Be as smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can, without blowing the packing out of your cylinder heads; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world, but don't dazzle people with it. And don't imagine a thing is so simple because you say it is. Don't be sorry for your father because he knows so much less than you #### do: remember the reply of Dr. Wayland to the student of Brown University who said it was an easy enough thing to make proverbs such as Solomon wrote. "Make a few," tersely replied the old man. And we never heard that the young man made any. Not more than two or three, anyhow. The world has great need for young men, but no greater need than the young men have of it. Your clothes fit you better than your father's fit him; they cost more money, they are more stylish, your is better, and you are prettier, oh, far prettier than "pa." But, young man, the old gentleman gets the biggest salary, and money out of the bank in five minutes, than you could get out with a ream of paper and a copperplated signature in six months. Young men are useful, son, and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a pic-nic successfully without them. But they are no novelties, son. Oh, no, nothing of the kind. They have been here before. Don't be so modest as to shut yourself clear out, but don't be so fresh you will have to be put away in the cool to keep from spoiling. Don't be afraid that your merit will not be discovered. People all over the world are hunting for you and if you are worth finding, they will find you. A diamend isn't so easily found as a quartz pebble, but people search for it all the more intently. - Burlington Hawkeye.
