A HOTEL ROMANCE.
How a Newly Married Couple Were Made Happy by an Old Bachelor.
There is many a sweet romance cherished by the visitor to New York that is never dreamed of by the prosaic, everyday people of business. Much of this romance is necessarily connected with the hotels. In these old hotels every room is interwoven with the history of hundreds of persons, and every time one of these persons is in the city the interest is revived in the past. One day a friend led me down Broadway on some pretext or another, and we finally passed before the old New York hotel.
"I stopped there on my wedding trip," he finally blurted out. "My wife wished it. Her mother had stopped there in her time and on her wedding trip. My wife was anxious to occupy the same room that her mother had. We had been married that day, and this was our first hotel, just as it had been in her mother's case, and my little one's mind was surcharged with the romance of the thing. But, like all young married folks, we had a horror of being conspicuous and at the first didn't like to say anything about it to the clerks. At last, however, I mustered courage enough to look over the register just to ascertain whether the room—we knew the number, floor and everything, as my wife had figured it all up in her own mind—was really occupied. We thought we might get it into it on some excuse or another. I merely desired to gratify her. But I couldn't find the number at all. You can't fool a hotel clerk very easily on such things, and in a little time he had the whole thing out of me.
"Confoundedly sorry, sir," said he, "but that particular room is occupied by a regular boarder and one of the cross-est old bachelors I ever knew to."

NEWSPAPER FARMING.
Come, all ye lowly farmers,
Come, all ye granger folk,
Who in the cultivation
Of wheat have come to lead broke
Since in the rural precincts
You cannot find your back,
Come here and learn the secret
Of making garden truck.
High up above the pyramids
There toils a gifted worker
Upon a morning sheet.
All night he looks at copy.
Of what he handles never
All day he sweats his thinker
And much of wisdom brews.
He grieves to think that farmers
Should play a losing hand
At plowing up the bosom
Of unresponsive land.
And in his grief he murmurs,
"With crops diversified
The farmer would be fit,
With fortune for his bid."
So come, ye lowly plowmen,
Who distast for something good,
And learn the golden secret,
For let it understand
That here we have a writer
Who deftly does the trick
Of making country butter,
By the paragon of stick.
—St. Paul News.
