Birds Mounted on the Backs of Whale

"Yes, we see curious things once in a while," said a San Pedro fisherman. "A few days ago I made a trip over the Sinta Catalina Channel for a load of abslenes that they pile up at the isthmus for me every few months, and when I got off there about ten miles I saw a big loon sitting on what seemed like a spar. But while I watched it seemed to fall off, then circled around several times and alighted again, retaining its position with much diffculty. The wind had almost died down, as we were in the lee of the Island, and we slowly drifted up to the bird until we were within fifty feet of it when I saw what the roost was-not spar at all, but a big fish—one of these fellows the Italians call the luna, because it was like the moon. This luna was the biggest one I have ever seen, and was so old that it was covered with goose barnacles and looked more like a piece of wreckage than anything else; that is what the bird probably thought it was.

The fish lay almost flat on the water, with one big fin sticking out, the other being under water, and the weight of the bird made it lean over to one side. As we neared it the bird rose and flew away, and the fish straightened up, but it made no attempt to move away as we came alongside, and it looked to me like a fish over one hundred years old. I struck it with an oar, but it moved only a little way off, then came to the surface again.

AN ACCOMMODATING WHALE.

Kidney and Backache Cure

"I saw something about as curious last year," continued the fisherman. "In August the waters of the islands off here from San Clements up are filled with fish that are spawning. The water will then SMOKED MEATS! be covered in places with small of the set them swimming about in schools of hundreds. On this trip I kept my eye be covered in places with small birds that out for whales, as a brother-in-law of inine is a whaler at Point Loma, and wanted to know the outlook for whales up this way. When about half-way over right in mid-channel, I saw the spout of a big gray whale, and the next minute saw the back of the whale, about twenty Mail orders with cash re- feet of it, black as ink, on the blue water To my surprise it did not disappear, and I soon concluded that the big creature ceive prompt attention and put was either asleep or lying on the surface sunning itself.

As we came nearer I saw at least fifty little birds running about on its back, feeding, evidently having a teast upon the various parasites on the whale's

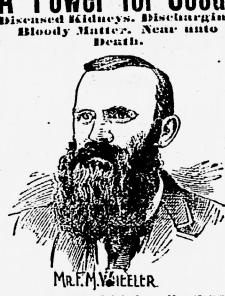

We lay off and watched them for some time. They ran up and down just as they would on a beach, and it occurred to me that it was not an accident, but that there was some understanding between the whale and the birds; in other words, the whale knew that the birds were relieving it of many parasites that it could not get rid of in any other way, and consequently, submitted to their running over it. Finally, its big flukes rose in the air, the cloud of birds flew away, and the whale, probably with a clean back, sank out of sight.

a log floating on the surface, as on it were numerous birds, some walking about, others apparently asleep. As we ran in nearer, I saw that it was a big sea turtie, asleep on the surface, and the birds had alighted upon its broad back These instruments have been before the public for nearly fifty years, and upon their excellence have attained an UNSURPASSED PREEMINANCE which establishes them as alongside, and we put a harpoon into the turtle and took it after it had towed us about the bay.

THE BASKING SHARK. "Up around Monterey a gigantic shark is sometimes—caught—in the net of the fishermen. It ranges from twenty to forty feet in length, and is known as the basking whale, from the fact that it floats on the top of the water, literally basking in the sunlight—much after the fashion of the sunfish. This affords a veritable floating island for the various sea birds that rise from it in a cloud as boats apbroach and sometimes ride upon it when be great fish swims with its back ex-

There are other sea jockeys than those mentioned. The writer some time ago caught a large hammer-head whale off Redondo beach. The big creature towed the boat about for nearly an hour, and when brought in sight of the boat it was seen to have several riders—fish, almost pure black and a foot in length-which were attached to the shark. The shark was struggling and fighting, cutting through the water with powerful rushes. but the little fish still clung to it, and finally, when it was hauled upon the beach the little black attendants came with it. They were clinging to the shark by a curious sucker on the back of the head that resembled the slats of a Venetian blind, and the suction was so powerful that when the plate or sucker was attached, it was extremely difficult to pull it off by main force. Half a dozen of these riders accompanied the shark and they are sometimes seen accompanying turtles—and may be called the real jockeys of the sea .- The American.

Found in the Letter-Box. Few people, says an English paper, are aware of the variety and value of the numerous articles which, by accident or design, frequently find their way into the various receptacles provided by the post office authorities for the reception of newpapers and general correspondence. The articles, however trivial, are immediately despatched to the Returned Letter Office, and if not claimed within a certain period, are, in conjunction with innumerable walking-sticks, unbrellas, postal orders, rolls of music, banknotes, and other odds and ends left on the writing-desks and counters of the different offices, disposed of by public auction, and the proceeds added to the revenue. Instances of thieves, hotly pursued by the police, depositing their ill-gotten booty in the letter-boxes are far from infrequent, and a case in point was quite recently brought under the personal observation of the present writer. A lady, standing in the vestibule of a Strand heatre, waiting for a cab, suddenly miss-ELECTRIC PIANOS, ed her gold watch and chain, and immediately challenged and seized a man, standing near, whom she suspected was the purloiner. Wrenching himself free, the pickpocket darted off, closely follow ed by a detective, who, it was subsequently found, had been watching his movements. After a long chase the officer succeeded in arresting the culprit, but when scarched at the police station, nothing of an incriminating nature was found upon him. Presently the astute officer recollected that when passing a certain post office the prisoner visibly GENTLEMEN WHO COME TO BAL- slackened pace, and, when taxed, he con-TIMORE with their families can be suit- fessed that, finding escape impossible, he had dropped the jewelry into the letter-J. originated by us. All successful speculators operate on a regular system,
It is a well-known fact that there are thousands of men in all parts of the United States who, by systematic trading through Chicago brokers, make large amounts every year, ranging from a few thousand dollars for the man who invests a hundred or two hundred dollars up to $50,000 or more by those who invest a few thousand.
It is also a fact that those who in the the largest profits from comparatively small investments on this plan are persons who live away from Chicago and invest through brokers who thoroughly understand systematic trading.

Our plan does not risk the whole amount invested on any trade, but covers both sides, so that whether the market rises or falls it brings a steady profit that piles up enormously in a short time short time
