For the Constitutional Amendment.

Against the Constitutional Amendment, said Amendment to the State Constitution being as follows:

CHAPTER 193.

AN ACT to amend to the Constitution of Maryland by a new Section to Article Four.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, three-fifths of all the members of both Houses concurring, That the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as hereinafter provided, the same shall stand as an additional section to Article 4 of said Constitution, to follow Section 31 and to be known as Section 31 A.

31 A. In addition to the sum of five hundred dollars, which by the preceding section the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore is authorized to pay to each of the Judges of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore city, the said Mayor and City Council of Baltimore is further authorized to pay to each of said judges annually a sum not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars, provided, that the same or any part thereof, being once granted, shall not be diminished during the continuance of said judges in office.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall be at the next general election to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection in pursuance of the directions contained in Article 14 of the Constitution of the State; and at the said general election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words, "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," so that the voter may elect; and immediately after said election due return shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said fourteenth article of the Constitution.

Approved April 9, 1899.

The polls of said election will be opened in each of every Election District of said county, at the usual places of holding the polls at 8 o'clock A. M., and will be closed at 6 o'clock P. M., when the ballots shall be counted.

The Returning Judges are required and directed to make their return on the second day, (Thursday), following the election, to the Board of Supervisors of Election for Howard county.

THE ROCKING CHAIR HABIT.

One Cause of Nervous Prostration Among Women, Says a Doctor.

"You must give me something to help me, doctor, you really must," said the woman patient. "Why, I'm a total wreck. I can't sit still a minute. I'm on the verge of prostration."

She swayed listlessly back and forth in the leather chair as she spoke and looked at the doctor helplessly. He nodded gravely.

"Yes, I see," he said. "Your nerves are in a terrible condition and no mistake. I wonder," he added after a moment's reflection, "what portion of the day you spend in swaying backward and forward as you are doing now?"

The rhythmical motion of the woman's body ceased, and she stared at him in surprise.

"Why, my land!" she ejaculated. "What a question! I don't do this any of the time at home. I don't have to. We have rocking chairs there." The latter statement was made somewhat spitefully, but it did not feaze the doctor.

"So I supposed," he said coolly, "and I've no doubt that you have often felt like denouncing doctors soundly for not having a goodly supply of them in their offices for the accommodation of nervous patients."

The woman started up the pendulum-like motion again. "Well," she returned, "I must say it would be a good deal more comfortable than having to sit in one of these straight, uncomfortable things."

Whether the doctor took offense at her uncomplimentary reference to his office chairs or whether he had been whetting himself up to the point where he could give her a sharp, professional talk it would be impossible to say, but certain it is his lecture broke loose then with vehemence.

"Now, see here," he said. "I have scores of women patients just like you. They come in here and tell me all about how their nerves are frazzled into strings, and they can't sit down, and they can't stand up, and they can't walk or eat or sleep or do this, that or the other thing. Oh, they're in a terrible condition! Well, that's right. They are in a bad fix. And so you want me to cure you? Well, I'm willing, but you've got to do your part. You cannot very well remove these deplorable defects without rooting out the cause, and you can't dig out the cause without throwing away rocking chairs. Oh, yes, I mean it—throw away the rocking chairs. They send more women to the grave and the insane asylum each year than all the sewing machines in the United States. They are at the bottom of more than half this nervous trouble you women are always complaining about, and if I had my way fully two-thirds of the rockers that now clutter up our houses would be split into kindling wood, and three-fourths of the factories that are now turning them out by the hundred would be shut down. People who have never given the matter thought have no idea how much energy is wasted in keeping a rocking chair on the go. The pretty, graceful things move very easily, I admit, being the best substitutes for perpetual motion yet invented, but for all that they eat up a vast amount of strength in the course of a day that might well be turned to more useful and less harmful ends. Why, I pity the person who suffers from the rocking chair drunk as much as I do the toper who burns his gullet out."

The sufferer from nervous prostration suddenly found her voice at this point.

"Oh, doctor," she protested, "don't put it that way. Don't say we get—get drunk. It sounds disgraceful!"

"Does it?" said the doctor calmly. "Well, unfortunately I always did believe in calling things by their right names, and that's what it really amounts to. I can tell people who are addicted to the rocking chair habit the minute I clap eyes on them, and I honestly think they are the most pitiable objects I find in a day's journey. They are ever restless and fidgety and ill at ease, and when deprived of the chair their distress is manifest. They simply don't know what to do with themselves. Take you yourself, now, for instance. You can't sit there for five minutes without getting up the rocking chair motion. Now, I am in earnest about this. If you want to get well, you must give up your rocking chair, just as a drunkard gives up his whisky. If you do that, you'll come out all right. A rocking chair may be restful and helpful to a certain point, but if taken to excess it is bound to play hob with the nerves sooner or later."—New York Sun.

A BOXER IN THE PULPIT.

Bob Green, the Colored Fighter, Has a Promising Trial Sermon.

Those who knew Bob Green, the boxer, ten years ago, when he edified select gatherings at the ringside of the old Cribb club, in a blind loft that was reached from a blind alley off Avery street, or when he fought before the Fair Play club, or when he was identified with a dance hall and "speak easy" on North street at a time when he interpreted human existence to amount to nothing more than a contest of wits between the police, who tried to find illicit liquor, and himself, who tried to make them not find it, those who knew him in those exciting years would scarcely have recognized him last night in Calvary Baptist church, at the corner of Shawmut avenue and Waltham street, when his rich baritone voice gave zest to the congregational singing and the fervent pleading of his trial sermon was the powerful extractor that uncorked effervescent "Amens" in all parts of the crowded room.

The discourse was well written and most admirably delivered. He interpreted the word accurately and incisively and showed conclusively by the aptness of his quotations that he had applied himself closely to Biblical study. He didn't say too much about himself, but he referred to the time when he was a crooked gambler and frequented one of the wildest resorts in Boston to concoct schemes to get money, even by robbery.

The whole service was most impressive, and no one could doubt the genuineness of the conversion. The ex-whirlwind will get his license to preach in a day or two. Then he will go to a Baptist college some more, and, in the fullness of time, he will return to Boston to be ordained the Rev. Robert H. Green of the Afro-American Baptist church.—Boston Herald.

A Neglected Grave.

In the cemetery of Choisey-le-Roie there lies a neglected grave. Not one flower blossoms there. Not one leaf of remembrance is ever placed upon it. Rank weeds hide it from view and heavy moss obscures the inscription. Yet could you scrape the moss away you would find the name of Rouget de l'Isle, the author of "The Marseillaise." It is thus that France takes care of her famous republican dead!—Philadelphia Press.

The Utility of Fly Screens.

"Our doors and windows have screens, so we sit out on the porch in comfort."

"How's that?"

"The flies all stay on the screens trying to get in."—Chicago Record.

A FILIPINO UNIFORM.

It Is Childish In Size and Very Gaudy In Color.

Among the interesting trophies soldiers in the Philippines have sent to Des Moines is a uniform which Frank Merrill of Company H, son of Jeremiah M. Merrill of 1201 East Ninth street, took from a captured Filipino and sent to his parents in this city. The uniform is patterned somewhat after the Spanish uniform and is quite fantastic for use in wartimes. The red and yellow combinations so popular with the Spaniards appear on the blouse of the uniform.

Some idea of the inferiority of the Filipinos and their insignificance as compared with Americans can be had from the size of the uniform. It would be a good fit for a 12-year-old American boy, and it is easy to believe all that has been said concerning the diminutive Filipinos after examining this uniform.

The trousers to the uniform are of red calico and are made regular pyjama style, being tied at the top with a drawstring. Along the outer seam of the legs are stripes of black velvet. The blouse is made of heavy cotton material, which is woven with alternate pin stripes of white and black. The collar of the blouse is of red calico and is adorned in front with two stripes of yellow calico. The cuffs of the blouse are also of red calico and bear three stripes of yellow. The front of the jacket bears six stripes of red and yellow calico combined.

Altogether the costume looks as if it might have been designed by some child who had a fondness for bright colors. The sewing on the garments has been done with a sewing machine, and the blouse has been fastened with hooks and eyes and buttons similar to those in common use in this country.—Des Moines (Ia.) Capital.

THE UP TO DATE MINISTER.

Must Combine the Gifts of an Impresario and an Auctioneer.

Ian Maclaren writes of "The Candy Pull System in the Church" in The Ladies' Home Journal and, after describing the tendency of the up to date church, designates the qualifications of a pastor for "this kind of institution." "The chief requisite demanded," he contends, "is a sharp little man, with the gifts of an impresario, a commercial traveler and an auctioneer combined with the slightest flavor of a peripatetic evangelist. Instead of a study lined with books of grave divinity and classical literature let him have an office with pigeonholes for his programmes and endless correspondence; cupboards for huge books, with cuttings from newspapers and reports of other organizations; a telephone ever tingling and a set of handbooks—'How to Make a Sermon In Thirty Minutes' or 'One Thousand Racy Anecdotes From the Mission Field.'

"Here sits an alert, vivacious, inventive manager, with his female stenographer at a side table, turning over one huge book to discover who is next in order of time for visitation and another for details of families or hastily examining filed speeches of public men on some subject to be taken on Sunday. From morning to night he toils, telephoning, telegraphing, dictating, compiling, hurrying around, conducting 'socials,' 'bright evenings,' giving 'talks,' holding receptions, an unwearied, adroit, persevering man. No one can help admiring his versatility and honesty of intention, but if he is to be the type of the minister of the future then he will supersede and exclude a better man."

Diplomats In China.

The picked diplomats of all Europe are sent to Peking, lodged sumptuously, paid high salaries and sustained by the certainty of promotions and rewards after a useful term at Peking, all but the American minister, who, according to Miss Seidmore, in the October Century, is crowded in small, rented premises, is paid about a fourth as much as the other envoys and, coming untrained to his career, has the cheerful certainty of being put out of office as soon as he has learned his business and another president is elected, his stay in Peking on a meager salary a sufficient incident in itself, leading to nothing further officially. The diplomats in exile lead a narrow, busy life among themselves, occupied with their social amusements and feuds, often well satisfied with Peking after their first months of disgust, resentment and homesickness, and even becoming sensitive to any criticism or disparagement of the place. They have their club, the tennis courts of which are flooded and roofed over as a skating rink in winter, their spring and autumn races at a track beyond the walls, frequent garden parties and picnic teas in the open seasons and a busy round of state dinners and balls in winter.

Two Views of Pingree.

"A few years ago," said a business man to a Lewiston Journal reporter, "I was taking dinner at a Detroit hotel when a rather distinguished looking man came in and took a seat opposite me and began to drum impatiently upon the table while waiting for the waiter. I noticed that he was in a hurry and that he was also a man of affairs and seemed to have a decided way about him. When the girl came and asked in a respectful way, 'What kind of sauce will you have on your steak, sir?' he looked up with a shadow of recollection in his good natured face and said, 'If the steak is as tough as it was yesterday, please bring me circular saws.'

"After he had brought the short and hurried dinner to a close and rushed off to his business I asked some one who he was and was told that he was Hazen S. Pingree of Michigan, now governor of that state. I saw him in Poland the other day, wandering about the roads with a dreamy, misty look in his eyes, and he seemed to be enjoying himself, for he was digging spruce gum with his pocket knife from a tree beside the road when we drove out of sight."

Boiling Eggs to a Hymn.

Bishop Paret of Baltimore was once the guest of an Episcopal family in West Virginia, says The Penny Magazine. Learning from the bishop that he liked hard boiled eggs for breakfast, his hostess went to the kitchen to boil them herself.

While so engaged she began to sing the first verse of the well known hymn "Rock of Ages." Then she sang the second verse, the bishop, who was in the dining room, joining in. When it was finished, there was silence. The lady herself came into the room a few minutes later, carrying the eggs, and the bishop remarked:

"Why not sing the third verse?"

"The third verse?" she replied. "Oh, that's not necessary."

"I don't understand," replied Bishop Paret.

"Why, you see, bishop," she replied, "when I am cooking eggs, I always sing one verse for soft boiled and two for hard boiled."

Not So Variable.

"I suppose," said the young woman who was going seashoreward, "that I will come back with some freckles and an engagement ring."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "and the difference between them is that the freckles will stay in place for at least six months."—Washinton Star.
