THE MASSACHUSETTS CONVENTION.

The proceedings of the Massachusetts Convention which ratified the United States Constitution will serve to show those who have read it what were the points of special difficulty in forming a Union of the States, perhaps quite as well as would a sketch of the Federal Convention itself. It was manifest that no Union could be had so long as any one State insisted on the adoption of its institutions for all the country, and it was only by yielding one and another desire by one and another State that a Union of all was at last effected. There were some points in this Massachusetts Convention worthy of special notice in our own time. Some radical men in that State opposed Washington because of his views on slavery, and one man in the Convention expressed the opinion that Washington was depreciated fifty per cent. in his estimation by the fact of his owning slaves. It will also be remarked by readers of this debate that there was an "on to Richmond" party in revolutionary times, and that Washington was attacked, as McClellan is now attacked, for not moving on when the outcry of certain politicians demanded it. The nation has cause to be grateful, as the writer of this abridgement remarks, that a Union was formed with slaveholders like Washington, and also it is to be remembered now with devout thanks that he was able to resist the "hounding on" of the radical men in his time, and he was not deposed from his command for offending them by his refusal.

We would be glad to see, in these times, a cheap edition of the Madison papers, relating to the Federal Convention. It would be a most desirable work to place in the hands of the people now, and we suggest it for the benefit of any enterprising publisher. It is very important that the spirit of the framers of the Constitution should be revived among us. A new law has been lately introduced into American politics. It may be styled unity-law in opposition to the Union. The proposal to make the nation homogeneous, and the principle is that the Union can only be permanent as the nation becomes a unit in institutions and opinions. The next step would lead us to one religion, and the same men would demand that we all worship God alike. They will argue that Protestants and Catholics cannot unite in a government unless they make a coalescing institution in their religion. Politically, this new dogma tends to a consolidated government with a despotic head. Radicalism demands a universal concession to itself, a bowing down of all men to its tenets. This doctrine is taught abundantly by imported Republicans from Europe. It was laid down by Carl Schurz two weeks ago and applauded by his audience. The best refutation it could have would be a study of the debates in the Federal Convention where the Union was formed on the grand foundation of mutual concessions.—Journal of Commerce.

THE ARREST OF SURGEON COXE, OF THE THIRD NEW JERSEY.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Times makes the following startling statement:

I have mentioned the case of Surgeon Coxe, of the 3d New Jersey, arrested on a charge of treason. The facts are said to be these: Since the evacuation of Manassas by the Confederates, a military paper, purporting to be the report of the Confederate General, was found in the wreck there by one of our officers, with something like this indorsement:

"Information as to the position and strength of the army, furnished voluntarily by Surgeon Coxe, of the 3d New Jersey."

This document contained statements to the effect that recruiting was played out in the North; the national army must decline for want of new enlistments; that the number of troops in Gen. Kearney's brigade, to which the Doctor's regiment belongs, were so and so, and thereabouts were so many more, etc. This document was sent to headquarters at Washington, and to that the Doctor's arrest is mainly attributed. He was taken prisoner to Washington on Monday last. It appears that the Doctor had been in the habit of absenting himself from the camp at night frequently, sometimes alone, and at other times accompanied by a few soldiers, always on the pretence of scouting. Repeatedly he lost two or three men on these excursions.

In October last he lost two or three men, and next day took a flag of truce to recover their bodies. It was on this occasion that the information was given contained in the above-mentioned report.—Dr. Coxe related, on his return to camp, the incidents of his visit within the Rebel lines; said he had been questioned, and that he had lied as well as he could, whereby so much from his camp as to neglect the duties of his office past forbearance. Col. Taylor at last approved and forwarded charges against him for inefficiency. Assured against [illegible] Doctor was put under arrest and kept in his tent. He resigned his office as Surgeon of the regiment. His resignation and the charges were sent together to Washington, and he immediately followed them as a prisoner. Dr. Coxe is, I believe, a resident of Philadelphia. His grandfather was a celebrated physician of that city, and he himself enjoyed excellent professional opportunities abroad in London and Paris. It may be he is wrongfully charged, but I give the alleged grounds of his arrest.

ARRIVAL OF CONFEDERATE PRISONERS OF WAR AT FORT DELAWARE.—Two hundred and twenty prisoners of war, captured at Winchester, Virginia, arrived at Delaware City to-day, and were to have been taken immediately to Fort Delaware, a powerful stone fortification on the Pea Patch Island, in the middle of the Delaware Bay. They were the same prisoners that had been previously confined at Baltimore, in the city jail. By order of the War Department, they were shipped on Saturday, in an Ericsson or canal steamer, and transported through the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, under guard to Delaware City. It was supposed to-day that they would be landed immediately at the Fort.

The Pea Patch is a large island, in the centre of which stands Fort Delaware, one of the best fortifications in the country, mounting three tiers of guns. It is two miles from the fort to either shore, and the island contains a number of residences, outside of the fort, so that it can be made a prison-place for at least a thousand prisoners. The present instalment will be confined within the stone fortress. The garrison of the place consists of a company of regulars and a few itinerant parties of artillerists that go down to the Pea Patch to practice artillery evolutions.

One of the prisoners is Bushrod C. Washington, a nephew of the late Colonel John A. Washington. Much sympathy was shown the prisoners in Baltimore, and they were cheered when they left the wharf en route for Fort Delaware.—Phila. Cor. N. Y. Herald, March 31.

GEN. CURTIS AT KRITSVILLE.—His Retrograde from Pea Ridge.—After subsisting for weeks in the very camps where Price and McCulloch had maintained their armies for nearly a year, General Curtis has fallen back from Pea Ridge to Keltsville, (Mo.,) fifteen miles distant, his forage having been exhausted. A retrograde movement, however unwelcome, it may have been to his troops, was, therefore, prudent and expedient, as it places the army in a much less exposed situation, and gives it ready access to supplies. A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial says:

Price has been largely reinforced since the battle at Pea Ridge, and the best informed military men here think his force is fully up to 40,000. Four hundred men, from north of the Missouri river, passed within six miles of this place to reinforce Price, only three days before the battle of Pea Ridge. A large train of ammunition left here last night for the column, urgent despatches having been sent by Gen. Curtis for it. Three pieces of artillery, which had been sent here to be repaired, were ordered back immediately, and were sent, although they had not been in Springfield an hour.

AN ENGLISH VESSEL CAPTURED.—The Emily St. Pierre, a fine ship of a thousand tons, from Calcutta, with two thousand bales of gunny bags on board, was captured by the James Adger, trying to get into Charleston, about ten days since. Her register was British, and her crew the same. She cleared from Calcutta for a port in New Brunswick, the captain alleging that he had orders to stop at Charleston, and go in if the port was not blockaded. When taken she was standing straight in on the fore tack, with mainsail set and spanker furled, hidden from the blockading vessels by a thick fog until she was within three miles and a half—a tolerably clear case of attempting to run the blockade. A prize crew was put on board, and she was sent to Philadelphia, with her own officers and crew as prisoners. She had no colors aboard when so taken, but the officer boarding learned from the crew that she had the Confederate flag lying fifteen days before leaving Calcutta, and that, when chased, they threw them overboard, tied to the lead. Information was also obtained that, when the Emily left, three other vessels were a Calcutta, loading for Charleston, one of them a ship of two thousand tons.
