An Exciting Scene-A Soldier Killed by His Comrader. - About 10 o'clock last night, as Col. Phelps' 22d New York Regiment was entering the Camden station, to take the cars for Washington, an event transpired which occasioned great alarm alike to the troops and the citizens. As the rear company was passing up the two steps at the end of the platform, near Camden street, one of the men fell, and bis musket being accidentally discharged, one his comrades became so frightened, supposing that | business, and there have been no sales of the they had been attacked, that he fired his gun in the | slightest consequence to report, direction of the crowd of spectators in their front, but his gun being elerated the shot passed over their heads.
