A MOTHER'S LAMENT.

Elegiac Lines in memory of an interesting boy who accidentally fell into the Basin and was drowned.

Ah! had he died by fierce disease,
Or fever's scorching blight;
By slow degrees had pined away
Before my aching sight—

I then had watch'd his languid eye
Beat feebly on mine own;
I could have raised his aching head
And heard his faintest tone.

The ready hand, the silent foot,
Had hover'd near my child,
And many an act of tender love
His anguish had beguild.

Some solace to a mother's heart
To catch the latest sigh,
In silent grief the form compose,
And close the dying eye.

His features, lovely e'en in death,
I then had gazed upon;
And, humbled, bow'd beneath the rod,
And breath'd "Thy will be done."

But, ah! one instant in my sight,
Buoyant with health and glee—
The cheek all bloom, the eye all fire,
The spirit bounding free!

The next—oh, God! my shrinking heart—
My boy is with the dead!
A livid and discolored corpse!
A sight of fear and dread!

Well may the heart with frenzy fraught,
In impious warmth declare,
'Tis human nature tax'd too far
For human pow'r to bear!

One moment on the trach'rous shore,
No voice to whisper doom,
With playful bound, he falter'd, fell,
And found a wat'ry tomb!

Emerging, wildly shriek'd for aid,
In vain did he implore,
The "whelming waters" o'er my child—
He sank to rise no more!

Oh, God!—thro' whose dread word of pow'r
This deep affliction came—
Oh! grant it wear our hearts from earth,
Our wayward spirits tame.

Omniscient in thy high behests,
In love dost thou chastise—
Oh! may this wound, our healing prove!
A blessing in disguise!

In deep submission let us view
Trials in mercy giv'n,
And cherish hope, when life is past,
To meet our boy in Heav'n!

"POSSESSION IS NINE POINTS IN LAW."

A curious illustration of this once occurred in Western Illinois. A young farmer had been settled for a few years there, and had selected for his residence a beautiful spot near the banks of the Wabash, and erected a very neat little farm house. As the neighborhood was very quiet, it was frequent for whole families to go visiting, leaving the house to take care of itself, barely taking the precaution to turn the key in the door. It was that beautiful season in autumn immediately following the harvest, when the farmers' hearts, as well as their labors, are lightest, and being a pleasant evening, farmer S. and his young wife had gone out to neighbor W's, to attend a little frolic. It so happened that in the gray of the evening, just when "the glimmering landscape began to fade from sight," an Irish emigrant, one of the first that had made his appearance in that region with his family, fortune, wife, pig, goods, chattels, and in fact all his worldly substance, strolled away within the boundaries of one of these long traveling wagons, then a novelty, but now as common in the West as hackney coaches in the Strand, drove along the road. Having halted, in the skirts of a neighboring wood, and made his necessary preparations for the night, Pat thought he would make some explorations in the vicinity, and seeing the cottage of farmer S. through the trees, he thought he would go in and make some enquiries as to the settlement.

Having advanced to the house and finding no one at home, and every thing being apparently deserted, the heart of the poor wanderer leaped within him like a frog at the sight of St. Patrick, and he really thought Providence had kindly smiled on him at last, and guided him, as the children were led to the promised land, to a house already prepared for his reception. Overjoyed, Pat hastens back to the wagon, where he found his Biddy sitting on a log, with a half dozen young "exiles of Erin" clamoring round her for the "wee bit o' bread."

"Biddy! Biddy!" says Pat, giving a leap into her presence like an opera dancer's last jump on a farewell benefit; "Och! my darling Biddy—but ye're a lucky moan; and Johnny McGraw's a lucky woman as he is—for I've found a house that we ken gang right in, and there's never a bodie to say a word aginst it."

"Och, here, Johnny, what's this ye're sayin'—away wid ye that 'ud play thrieks wid a pair hungered, tired wive, wha, an' wha, na for ye, Johnny, wid hae been a widdy lang ago. Hout, moan! awn wiv your clishmaclaver, an' come, take a wee bit o' bread, an' take a wee drap o' whiskey to atay yer stomach, for the night's gettin' right chillish, so it is."

"Arrah, my himie! come along wid me, and it's Johnny McGraw jist, that'll show ye a bonnie wee house as iver was seen in a' the braith of green odd Ireland; God bless her frae St. Patrick day till noo! Come along wid me, an' let the poor childers be hooded vunst more."—There was no more to be said, so Johnny taking in his arms the two wee little "uns, and Biddy leading by the hands a couple "of a larger growth," they trotted off to the house.

On arriving there, it was but a few minutes work for Johnny to raise a good fire in the kitchen, where he found plenty of materials prepared—and in half an hour the night had closed in, the fire was cheerily burning, the children were making rare sport among the farmer's moveables, and Biddy and Johnny sat in the corner comfortably smoking, and conversing on their good fortune, with all the warmth of feeling peculiar to the Irish. Many were the plans they had laid for their future management, and many a dream of riches and prosperity had now received a "local habitation"—and they were to write home "to ould Ireland to tell them that Ameriky was sure enough a free country, that they found houses ivery where ready to live in for the poor emigrants"—when all on a sudden who should enter but farmer S., with a huge hickory stick in his hand, ready and apparently willing to fell poor Pat at a blow, for thus intruding on his premises, while Mrs. S. had timidly shrunk behind the door in the entry, after vainly endeavoring to dissuade her husband from entering, until he had called in the neighbors. Johnny stood aghast—Biddy instinctively seized a broom—while the children huddled up in the corner, so frightened that their eyes protruded as though they had been squeezed half to death.

"Who are you, sir?" said S., advancing furiously on our hero. "Who are you, and what are you doing here, you vagabonds?" But Johnny couldn't say a word. Half through bodily terror, and partly from the effects of this terrible blight of his prospects, he stood like one bewildered, with hands and knees trembling like an aspen. "Johnny! are ye spalpeen?" said Biddy, who had the presence of mind to perceive the situation of things at a glance, having all the while been "summat" dubious of this state of things. "Tell the gentleman, Johnny, the mistake ye have made, and maybe, honey, he'll forgive it ye." "Ye see, sir, we cam to the house, thinking to get some knowledge of the country jist, when we sees nae bodie here jist, and we thinks of course the house was untenanted, and we took possession, as maybe ye'd a doon yersel, sir, had ye been the likes o' us pair bodies—and surely ye'll no harm us far that." The appeal of Biddy had the desired effect.—The whole matter was explained, and S., who till now filled with rage, had not noticed the grotesque appearance of the group, burst out into a hearty laugh, and thus it terminated.—New Orleans Crescent City.

Given under my hand at the city of Washington, the 8th day of April, A. D. 1841, and of the Independence of the United States of America the sixty-fifth.

JOHN TYLER.

By the President:
DANIEL WEBSTER, Secretary of State.

THE PUBLIC FEELING. As a steambot was about leaving Wheeling, crowded with passengers, a heartless man observed that he regarded the President's death as a public blessing. The remark started those who heard it, and for a time, deep silence was the only answer which was made. At length a man, venerable in appearance and years, in a voice stifled with grief, said, such wanton levity was not consistent with a true American, and that he would not travel with any one who could so speak. All the passengers concurred in this opinion, and the heartless wretch was ordered on shore as being unfit to associate with men.—Cincinnati Republican.

PRETTY GOOD. A gentleman by the name of Tuble, was frequently pursuing an interesting young lady by calling her the belle, &c. A facetious female friend observed to him, that he had been ringing that belle long enough, and to be frank, she would advise him now to make her Tuble.

—We learn, says the Norfolk Beacon, by a letter from the Purser of the U. S. sloop of war Concord, that Lieut. Algernon S. Worth died at sea on the 3d of February, 1841. He has left a wife in Portsmouth, Va., to mourn his loss.

—THE BOSTON MAIL comes to us considerably enlarged, but without any improvement in its typography. Its modesty is only equalled by its palateness.

—GEN. GAINES, lady and infant, arrived in N. Orleans on the 4th inst. and took lodgings at the St. Charles.

For the Baltimore Clipper.

Messrs. Editors: I am much obliged to your correspondent for his reply to my question concerning round and square timber; but, with all deference to his superior knowledge, I do not think he has met the point which I made. I wished to know the reason of the thing; and it is not a sufficient answer to say that the English Parliament decreed so and so in regard to this measure. That body decided on the barley corn as the lowest element of a measure of length—and also that 12 inches shall make a foot—but had they determined that any thing more or less than 144 square inches should make a square foot, no act passed by them could have made it reasonable or correct.

So with the measure under discussion. It is not, it seems to me, one of simple length, but belongs to solid measure. If it is merely an arbitrary measure, and confined to length only, it is ridiculous and useless; for what point of comparison is there between round and square timber in the statement as now enunciated? According to the view of your correspondent, a cylinder of timber 40 feet long and 3 feet in diameter may make a ton or load; while a piece of timber 50 feet long and but 6 inches square will likewise amount to the same quantity. This is absurd.

There must, then, be some relation between the size of the round and that of the square timber in order to make a fair and satisfactory measure. I did think it was intended to compare a square piece of timber and a round log, from which a square piece of equal size could be hewn; but on making the calculation, I find that the round piece of 40 feet length would contain many more solid feet than a square piece of timber into which it is susceptible of being hewn, even though 50 feet long. Besides, in buying round timber, the purchaser, instead of getting less, always gets more than he would if it were hewn. I must say, I am still "puzzled" to know what the statement means.

SINGULAR. One of the workmen attached to the Baltimore Shot Tower, while passing through Howard's Park, at an early hour yesterday morning, heard a flock of wild geese passing over him, and looking up saw something white descending towards the ground. He took off his hat containing his handkerchief, and was thus enabled to catch unbroken a large goose egg, which had been sent down by one of the aerial party referred to.—American.

We should be pleased to see the egg—we should like to be informed of its weight, dimensions, &c.—we should like to know what kind of a crown that hat had—we should like to know from what altitude the egg fell—we should like to see a vote of thanks to the gentleman who caught it, for his astonishing presence of mind—could there not be an express sent after the wild geese? We should like to know if the egg had fallen on the gentleman's head, what would have been the consequences—we should like to know if the whole affair is not like the three pieces of coin which only make one dollar on the first of April!

Against the WORLD for CHEAP HATS!

THE Subscriber takes this method of informing his friends and the public generally, that he has now on hand a large and general assortment of HATS of his own make, which he is determined to sell low for cash. His prices are uncommonly low for the quality of the Hat. Splendid Russia Hats at $2.50; fine Florentine Hats at $2.50; Fur Hats at $2.50; Fur Hats from 1.50 to $3.00; Claret Nuts Hats $1; Claret Beaver Hats $1.50; White Russia Hats, at from 2.50 to $3.50. He would invite the public to call and examine his Hats, for he is confident there is no Hat in the city to compare to his at the above prices. All Hats purchased of me will be Ironed over and put in shape free of charge. fe4 3m

TO THE PUBLIC.—The price of HATS again lowered. TOWSON is now selling in Eutaw street, one door north of Lexington street, his superior Hats at the following low prices—fine short Nap Mole Skin Hats at $2.50, fine Irish Hats $2.50; Fur Hats from $1.50 upwards. It may be asked how such Hats can be sold (if as represented) at such very low prices; I answer in the first place, I manufacture very extensively, and am able to purchase materials by the quantity much lower than if I bought by the small and secondly, I sell for cash, and do not have to charge those who pay a high price, to make up for those who do not pay, as the natural result of the credit system. I think my Hats the best as now offered in the market for the price. Persons will please call and look at my hats before purchasing elsewhere. Remember TOWSON, one door north of Lexington street.

FLORIDA. The National Intelligencer says:—"Our information, we are sorry to say, leads us to the belief that there is a mischievous influence at work among certain persons in Florida other than Indians, which, prompted by merely mercenary considerations, counteracts the dispositions of the Indians for pacification, and prompts them to keep up hostilities when they would otherwise find their interest in giving up their arms. It is difficult to believe in the reality of conduct so detestable; yet it is positively affirmed in private letters received in this city. We express only what we are sure must be the universal sentiment when we say that those white savages are infinitely more criminal and more worthy of punishment than the red men whom they practice upon."

We think it very probable that the Indians have been instigated to their course by white men who make a profit by the continuance of the war. We hope that measures will be adopted at the extra session of Congress to bring the Florida contest to a speedy close. There appears to have been great imbecility in the management of this Indian war, or local obstacles are greater than we apprehended. It has already cost the nation some twenty millions of dollars—and, notwithstanding hopes are occasionally held out that the contest is approximating to a termination, yet we can have little expectation of that event so long as the Indians can be influenced by interested white men, who seek, for their own advantage, to prolong the war. Effectual steps should be immediately taken to apprehend and punish, in the most exemplary manner, those white savages who are thus engaged in the traffic of blood, and to prosecute the war against the Indians with the utmost rigor. The repeated acts of treachery, of which the enemy has been guilty, render it unsafe to confide in any profession; and the sooner an efficient force is sent to compel their submission, the better will it be for themselves and the country.

BALTIMORE MARKET,
April 16, 1841.

Flour. Business in Howard-st. flour during the past week has been rather limited. Sales have been generally made at $4.62; from stores for good common brands. Some transactions have been made during the latter part of the week at $4.57. A fair quotation may be made at $4.50. We continue to quote the wagon price at $4.50. City Mills continues at $4.62. The stock on hand is light. Sales of Susquehanna are still made at $4.62; though the market generally as regards flour is dull.

Grain. We quote Penn. wheat at 100a100c, reds we quote as at last quotations, 90a100c, according to quality, and prime 109c. Penn. Rye 54a55c, and Md. 50c. Corn—A fair quotation for Md. white is 45a47 according to quality, and of yellow do. 47a49c. Oats are scarce and in demand. We note last sales of Maryland at 33 a 35 cents, and of Virginia at 33 cent per bushel. The transactions in cloverseed are small, the article being partially out of demand. We quote at $4.25 a 4.50. Limited transactions have been made in timothy seed from stores at $2.62 a 3, as to quality.

Provisions. In the provision market we note no material change. For the past week transactions have been tolerable. We quote mess beef at $12.50, No. 1 at $10.50 &c. according to quality. Baltimore Mess Pork continues at $12.50; No. 1 $10.50, and prime from 8 to $9.50. Sales of Western Bacon have taken place at 6a6c per lb.; Hams do. 8a9c; Middlings 6c and Shoulders 6c; prime Balt. cured Hams we quote at 10c, and Sides do. 8c. Western Lard, No. 1, 8c. for cash. There is hardly anything doing in Western Butter. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in mixed lots have been sold at 7c to 7c. In Glades there is nothing doing.

Cattle. Beef Cattle on the hoof we quote at $7.75a$8.25 per 100 lbs. Live Hogs are plenty, and will bring from $3.50 to $5.62 per 100 lbs.

Whiskey. We quote hds. at 20c and bbls. 23c. The wagon price exclusive of the bbls. is 18c., which is a small reduction.

SALE OF VALUABLE PROPERTY.

UNDER an order of the Orphans' Court of Baltimore County, the subscribers, as administrators, will offer for sale at public auction on SATURDAY, 24th of April at 10 o'clock, P. M. on the premises part hereinafter described, the following property:

1. The lot of Ground beginning at the North East corner of Howard and Saratoga streets, running thence Northerly on Howard street 40 feet 6 inches, thence Easterly 105 feet parallel to Saratoga street to an alley 12 feet wide; thence 40 feet 6 inches on said alley, to Saratoga street, and parallel to Howard street; thence Westerly on Saratoga street to the beginning—subject to a yearly ground rent of $14 and 40 cents. This lot is improved with a large brick BUILDING used for stores and a dwelling. It may easily be divided into two dwellings—and now rents yearly for $42.

2. A ground rent of $147 per annum, charged on a piece of ground at the South West corner of Princes and Saratoga streets, subject to a prior rent of $30, making the net ground rent $117. The piece of ground binds on Eutaw street 65 feet, and extends with that breadth westerly 143 feet—and is well improved. The rent of $147 is paid in the portions of $29 7/8, $37, and $80, by the several owners of the improvements.

The terms of sale are, that one-fourth of the purchase money be paid on the day of sale, and the residue in three equal instalments in 6, 9, and 12 months with interest from said day—and all the payments to be secured by bonds or notes, with security, to be approved by the administrators of the premises.
