His remarks were of an elecquent character, and reviewed the rebellion from its beginning to the present time. He stated that there were men at all times ready to find I fault with the Administration and find fault for all the reverses of the war. The authorities at Washington performed the duties assigned them—they did so from the beginning of the rebellion, and they are doing so now. What has been done was done mobly, conscientionely, and with a determination to crush out the rebellion at all hazards. The past failures of our armies has not been the fault o' our armics nor the fault of the government. The secret lay in the deficiencies of those who led them; mere ambilious men, who disregarded the cardinal points for which they were to battle for, and who endeavored to purposes other than suppressing the rebellion ! and crushing out treason. The aspect of the army is brilltant and full of hope, and portends a glorious triumph. A certain and complete defeat of the rebel hordes, both in the field .
