DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Michael Cresap House is located on the north side of Main Street and the junction of Green Spring Road, Oldtown, Maryland. It is just north of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and the Potomac River and south of the Western Maryland Railroad track and Maryland Route 53.

The two-story fieldstone structure has a basement and an attic. The north elevation was built against an almost perpendicular slope in order to allow the original stream to flow through the basement. As a result of its position the north wall of the basement is underground and the first floor is at the hillside ground level on the north side. The south side first floor is the entrance into the basement. The building is three bays wide with a central door on the first and second stories of the north facade.

On the street (south) facade the basement may be entered from the yard level, while its back wall is underground, where the spring flows. A porch runs across the south facade of the first story, its floor gives shelter to the area over the basement doorway.

The west gable-end wall is blank. The short interior chimney juts out of the tin roof not quite flush with the west gable end wall.

Adjoining the house to the east is a two-story brick addition which is of 19th. century type materials.

There are iron bars on the basement windows on the south facade which date from the period when the basement was used as a jail. Some digging about this time in the interior of the west wall in the basement, into the foundations of the chimney stack revealed earlier masonry forms indicating an earlier fireplace and chimney.

On the upper floors, the present wood trim is of the late 18th. century or early 19th. century type, indicating that the principal rooms were remodeled. There is no interior doorway between the old house and the newer brick addition.

In 1970 a "passage" was discovered which contained 18th. century coins, sections of pipes and other artifacts.

There are two interior rooms on each floor of the main building. Finished in plain style, they have wide board floors.

The Michael Cresap house is owned by the Reverend Irving Allen, who purchased it in order to preserve the structure. He has installed a museum of period artifacts and maintains the

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Michael Cresap House was the home of the eighteenth century frontiersman, Michael Cresap, (1742-1775). It is reputedly the oldest extant building in Oldtown whose village history dates to the seventeenth century. A Shawnee tribe had an Indian village there.

In 1741 Michael Cresap's father Thomas Cresap (c.1702-1790) a prominent frontiersman, founded Oldtown and built a fortified trading post and home. Until the establishment of Cumberland, Maryland, Oldtown was the only settlement in Maryland west of the Conococheague Creek in Washington County.

Michael Cresap followed his father's example by building the extant structure as a trading post-home and by exploring the wilderness in search of sites for future settlement. Cresap was one of the outstanding eighteenth century frontiersmen in the Ohio Valley although he is not as well known today as his contemporaries; Daniel Boone and George Rogers Clark. In 1774 Cresap led an expedition to clear bottom lands of the Muskingum River for occupation. Strained relations with the Indians compounded the difficulties of Cresap's frontier party. On at least two occasions he prevented his men from attacking. The murder of a peaceful Indian family, far distant from Cresap and his party, touched off Lord Dunmore's War (April-October 1774). Cresap served in the war as a captain in the Virginia militia; he was a signatory of the peace treaty.

His stature as a leader is attested to by the fact that western Maryland volunteers at the beginning of the Revolution chose Michael Cresap to command them. In 1775 Cresap led these men to join the Continental Army at Boston, Massachusetts, covering the 550 mile journey in twenty-two days--a remarkable twenty-five miles per day. Once in New England Cresap suffered a relapse of an earlier illness which forced him to resign his command. He died in New York City on October 18, 1775, en-route home.

Cresap's home in Oldtown became the property of his widow. After remarrying she conveyed it to Michael Cresap's son-in-law, (see continuation sheet 1) building which attracts visitors from all over the nation.

#8. SIGNIFICANCE

Luther Martin (c. 1742-1826), first attorney general of the State of Maryland, and an eminent lawyer. Martin held the property for a short time; he sold it to his brother-in-law, James Cresap.

Luther Martin's association with Michael Cresap gained national notoriety in the 1790's. Thomas Jefferson in Notes on the State of Virginia published an account of the murder of the Indian family that touched off Lord Dunmore's War naming Cresap as the culprit. Through several letters published in newspapers Martin refuted Jefferson's story. The evidence completely exonerated Cresap although Jefferson never conceded.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The famous "Stone House Occupied by Michael Cresap over 200 years old still stands and is in good condition.

It is intact enough for living quarters although it is now used as a museum.

In 1780 a brick annex was attached "against" the stone house (three sides brick) and separate from The Stone house

Trenches and part tunnels had to be filled to protect the foundation, escape ramps and porches that were flimsy had to be removed. The windows are not the original but the rest is still pretty much the same as beginning.

The tin roof leaks slightly and this may not have been the original. As soon as enough is received maybe another roof will be put on.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

The oldest house in the Oldest town in Allegany county Maryland. As Oldtown Md was an Indian "Town" on the trade route and trading recorded as early as 1561 between Indians and traders at the mouth of the Potomac river it is significant in being the histeric spot of that Town.

Hearth of the Famous Cresap Families headed by Thomas Cresap pioneer, and first white settler of this western Md. frentier.

House was a meeting place of the founders of this nation. Cresap, Washington, Jacobs, Asbury, and others....

America's first president --here many times
 America's first Methodist Bishop Asbury..here many times.
 America's first Troops to answer Washington's call met here in this house before hiking to Boston Mass.

Bottom room is the JAIL

Owned once by Cresaps son in law One of Md. first attorney
 General----Luther Martin

Seat of the Methodist socities of the 1700's

Numerous families have lived in this colonial home.

From time to time the eld house surrenders more of its past and this air of mystery calls us to a part of it.

The Michael Cresap house is built of native stone, from half ton to half pound. Two rooms on first floor, two bedrooms on second floor with ramp to the outside. Fireplaces in every room. Basement used as a jail. Timbers were cut, bored, and pegged. All metal hinges were made by hand. In 1781, the year Michael's widow married Rev. Jacobs, a two-story brick addition was built. Michael Cresap fought in the Dunmore's War against the Indians, Captain of a company of Dunmore's troops. He was a signer of "Dunmore Treaty" in Oct. 1774. He engaged in extensive road-building and forest-clearing West of Fort Cumberland. Michael Cresap was captain of the first Maryland troops to join Washington's Army in the Cambridge campaign. He is buried, with military honors, in Trinity Churchyard, New York City.

George Washington was a visitor to the Michael Cresap House. In George Washington's Journal, he stated that he had stayed at the Cresap House. Aug, 1948 issue National Geographic Magazine - "On the main Street stands the still inhabited Cresap house, a large two-story stone dwelling built about 1765 by Michael, the frontiersman's youngest son. I was told the basement had once been used as a jail during the Indian Wars. For the unfortunate Braddock, Oldtown was a rendezvous point on his wilderness march toward Fort Duquesne.

(18A.) Cresap House

In 1764, Michael Cresap, the youngest son of Colonel Thomas Cresap, and his wife, Mary, built the original stone house in Oldtown on Main Street at the junction of Greenspring Road. The older portion of the building, which is two hundred years old, is made of beautiful native fieldstone and has a basement, main floor, second floor, and large attic, probably used originally as sleeping quarters. Each level has two large rooms with wide board floors and winding stairs leading to the next level. The old house at one time had its own spring and various outbuildings. The basement windows still contain the bars that enabled it to serve as a town jail in early days. In 1781 Mary leased the property and the new proprietor built an almost identical brick addition to the original stone structure. There is no access between the two houses on the inside. The house is now unoccupied and is in partly dilapidated condition, but its present owner, Mr. Irvin G. Allen, has filled it with antiques and other relics which are of the same era as the house. Furthermore, Mr. Allen is interested in selling the house to anyone interested in restoring it to its original condition. Early action is recommended to save this important relic.
