Pratt Farm
Federal Hill, Mount Savage
1820's

The Pratt Farm was originally settled by John Barncord around 1823. He built the log portion of the farmhouse. James Pratt purchased the farm in 1875 after Barncord added two other tracts in the 1840's. It has been farmed by Pratt's descendants for more than one hundred years.

The original cabin, a larger log addition, a smokehouse, and a barn are all constructed of logs with locally popular "V" notching. All buildings on the farm have original roofs of wooden shakes.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Pratt Farm is located on Federal Hill, southeast of Mount Savage.

The building originally consisted of a one and one-half story, two bays wide log structure with "V" notching and mud chinking covered with german siding. It rests on a high foundation of random rubble stone with a plain water table. The gable flank roof is covered with wooden shingles. Original eaves consist of rafter ends. A large outside end stone chimney is original. The door and windows have been removed. A shed roofed porch with wooden shingles has collapsed.

A two and one half story, two bays wide addition abuts the original on the east. Wall construction is of logs with "V" notching and mud chinking covered with german siding. It rests on a low foundation of random rubble stone with a plain water table. The gable flank roof is covered with wooden shingles. Eaves consist of a box cornice with soffit and returns. The addition has an interior brick chimney.

An addition abuts the log addition on the north. Wall construction is frame with german siding. It rests on a high foundation of random ashlar stone with a plain water table. The gable flank roof is covered with wooden shingles. Eaves consist of a box cornice with soffit and returns. A brick chimney is in the center of the frame addition. Windows are pedimented pegged, two over two lights with fluted jambs and wooden lugsills.

What is probably a log smoke house with "V" notching and mud chinking is west of the Farmhouse. It rests on a high foundation of random rubble stone and has an excellent wooden shingle roof. Poles are hung across the interior of this smoke house. Hooks hanging on the poles consist of a piece of vine with a sharpened piece of wood wrapped around the pole.

A large log barn southeast of the farmhouse is open in the middle. It rests on a random rubble stone foundation and has a wooden shingle roof, now collapsed.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

One tract of land that is part of the Pratt Farm is "Military Lot 3386," which was patented to George Sapp in 1801.(1) Sapp's name appears in a 1788 list of settlers living west of Fort Cumberland.(2) He had settled elsewhere before receiving this tract, one of several thousand fifty acre tracts set aside for veterans of the American Revolution.(3) Sapp sold the tract and another six years later to Jacob Fare who sold them to John Barncord in 1822. (4)

Barncord settled the land and built the original log portion of the Farmhouse shortly after 1823. (5) James Pratt purchased the farm in 1875 after Barncord had added two other tracts in the 1840's.(6) It has been farmed by Pratt's descendants for more than one hundred years. The current owner recalls that his uncle, a former owner, stated that John Barncord's log house was standing in 1875 when James Pratt purchased the farm. (7)

The original cabin, a larger addition, a smokehouse, and a barn are all constructed of logs joined with the locally prevalent "V" notching. All of these buildings and a later frame addition have roofs of wooden shakes which are rare for the area. The Pratt Farm stands as a physical reminder of the resourcefulness of the early settlers of the mountains of western Allegany County.
