Glen Savage Dairy Farm

Mount Savage

Private

This two and one-half story frame farmhouse is three bays wide and three bays deep. It is typical of neo-rationalistic styled dwellings which were popular early in the 20th century.

The dairy farm is popularly known as the site of the late 18th century settlement known as "Arnold's Hotel." During the latter half of the 19th century the farm was known as the "Mount Savage Farm." The farm house was built by the Henckel family between 1906 and 1910.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Glen Savage Dairy Farm is located on Mile Lane north of Mount Savage. The square dwelling is two and one-half stories tall and three bays wide on the eastern facade ground floor. Wall construction is frame with weatherboard siding. The truncated medium hipped roof is covered with asphalt shingles and has snowbirds. Eaves consist of a boxed cornice, soffit, bed mould and a frieze. The building rests on a high foundation of coursed ashlar stone.

Porches include a wide hip roofed porch on the facade. The porch roof is supported by four tapered wooden Roman Doric columns. Decorative balusters are turned. A smaller hip roofed porch on the western elevation has been enclosed with multiple light windows. Windows of the house are 1/1 sashes with drip mouldings. Ground floor windows of the facade are wide. The main entrance in the center of the facade includes a one light transom with drip moulding and a modern door. An original brick chimney is located on the interior of the house. Four gabled dormers have pairs of 4/1 sashes with pediments.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Glen Savage Dairy Farm is a large commercial dairy operation located north of Mount Savage. Oral tradition and local histories identify the farm as the site of the earliest settlement of the Mount Savage area. In his "History of Mount Savage" Charles Carney wrote that the Arnold family settled beside a trail which became known later as the Turkey Foot Road where they operated a farm and an inn referred to as Arnold's Hotel. The farm has been under continued operation since then and is presently the site of the Glen Savage Dairy Farm. Although the exact location of the archeological site is unknown a stone outbuilding on the farm is believed to be a remnant of the Arnold homestead. (Interview)

During the latter half of the 19th century the farm was the property of Jonathan Arnold's grandson, John Sampson Combs, and was known as the "Mount Savage Farm." Descriptions of the farm which appeared in an 1896 court case mention several houses, two barns, and a grist mill. (Equity Case #4535) In 1898 Comb's daughter, Mrs. Althea Combs Kuykendall, began to sell tracts of the farm to various families including the Ewalds, O'tooles, and the Henckels. (Land Records)

In 1906 the Kuykendalls sold a large tract of the "Mount Savage Farm" to Lawrence Henckel. The O'toole Farm was added to the Henckel property in 1934. (Land Records) Tax assessments show that the large neo-rationalistic styled frame farmhouse was built between 1906 and 1910. (Tax Assessments) The entire property was acquired by the Bruce House Dairy, Inc. in 1948. (Land Records) The farm today is operated by the Robison family and consists of the Henckel Farmhouse, a vertical board wagon shed, the stone outbuilding mentioned above, a modern barn, and the house and barn of the O'toole farm.
