DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Andrews Hotel is located on the east side of Snug Harbor Rd., less than 1/4 of a mile from the intersection of Rt. 468 (Shady Side Road) in Shady Side. The building faces west.

The structure is a rambling three part former hotel building of weatherboard, between two and three stories high. The southeast section was built in 1886-1888 as a two-story, three-bay dwelling with a center gable roof. Having a center entrance and 6/6 light sash, it has shed porches on the front (east elevation) and rear. It grew to include a grocery store and a few boarders within a few years was opened as the "Rural Home", a summer hotel. The three sections of the building include: the 1886 house (described above) and the wing abutting it on the north; a nearly square three-story, three bay center section with a gable front roof; and a three-story, four-bay wing with a flat roof with which the building terminates on the north. The latter sections have an enclosed porch with a balcony across the front elevation. The hotel was closed in 1968, and presently parts of it are rented.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The building is significant as a material reminder that Shady Side was for more than half a century a summer resort for Baltimore and Washington. Lois Andrews remembers the history of the hotel- the "Rural Retreat" as it was known when she was a girl- because her father, Robert Franklin Nowell, built and ran it (c. 188-1930). She and her husband took it over (c. 1930-1968) and renamed it the Andrews Hotel. According to Mrs. Andrews, families from Washington came by train to Bay Ridge where they were met and taken by sail boat to the hotel. The Baltimore families arrived year after year on the steamer "Emma Giles". One family, she recollects came back 40 years in a row. Amusements such as concerts and dances were held at the hotel. Since there was no beach or pier connected with the hotel, the guests were taken out in boats to swim and fish and to watch the sunset. The hotel closed in 1968.

Destroyed 1986 - fire and torn down
