

CAPSULE SUMMARY
111 Charles Street (AA-387)
Annapolis, Maryland

The modest building at 111 Charles Street was one of the first structures erected on the lots denoted as 101-109 Charles Street. One of a pair of wood frame dwellings, the building was erected by property owner Isaac N. Morehouse, a carpenter, in the years between 1880 and 1882. Unaltered on the exterior, the building represents a phase in the development of Charles Street and the property historically associated with the Adams-Kilty House at 131-133 Charles Street.

The wood frame structure, set upon a brick foundation with oyster shell mortar, is three bays wide and two bays deep. It is covered by a sloped roof, sheathed with composite material that obscures the original metal roofing. The Italianate style building is ornamented with paired brackets on the overhanging cornice and has pedimented lintel caps. The roof is pierced by a single brick chimney at the center. The rectangular shaped building has a two-story, two-bay wide ell with a one-story shed roof addition.

The two-story building at 111 Charles Street was constructed between 1880 and 1882 as one-half of a twin dwelling.¹ The wood frame structure, set upon a brick foundation with oyster shell mortar, is three bays wide and two bays deep. It is covered by a sloped roof, sheathed with composite material that obscures the original metal roofing. The Italianate style building is ornamented with paired brackets on the overhanging cornice and has pedimented lintel caps. The roof is pierced by a single brick chimney at the center. The rectangular-shaped building has a two-story, two-bay wide ell with a one-story shed roof addition.

Exterior

The facade of the building, fronting southeast on Charles Street, is three bays wide with a side-passage entry. Located in the westernmost bay, the entry opening holds a single leaf replacement door composed of stained glass and recessed panels. The opening is capped by a recessed stained glass transom. To the east are two elongated 2/2 windows with louvered shutters, square-edged casings, and wood sills. All of the openings on the first story are sheltered underneath the full-width porch. The replacement porch, composed of a brick and concrete foundation, has wrought-iron rails and posts that support the half-hipped asphalt shingle roof and its boxed cornice. The porch abuts the lintels of the first story openings with the frieze running between the openings.

The second story of the facade has three equally spaced window openings with louvered shutters, wood sills, and square-edged surrounds. The 2/2 windows are topped by pedimented lintels with projecting ogee-molded caps. The point of the pediments are mimicked in the frieze of the entablature by segmental-arches. The boxed cornice is supported by pairs of scrolled brackets.

The southwest elevation fronts a fourteen foot alleyway between 109 and 111 Charles Street. This asbestos clad elevation, with a parged brick foundation, has two window openings on the first story. The 2/2 windows have wood sills, louvered shutters, and pedimented lintels. The second story has a paired two-light casement window of aluminum with wood sills and square-edged surrounds. The wall is capped by the overhanging boxed cornice with scrolled brackets and wide frieze.

At the northwest elevation, the first and second story of the main block are visible in the westernmost bay, which is pierced by 2/2 windows with wood sills and square-edged surrounds. There are no openings on the exposed portions of the northeast elevation of the main block or ell.

The two-story rear ell has a replacement four-lights over three-panel wood door and two 6/6 windows with louvered shutters and wood sills. A single brick interior end chimney runs between the window openings to pierce the shed roof of the ell. On the second story, the ell has two openings with 6/6 windows. The northwest elevation of the ell has a late 20th century one-story addition clad with German siding. The shed roof addition, sheathed with asphalt shingles, has two casement windows, one single and one paired. The aluminum windows have backbanded surrounds. The second story of the ell, looking northwest, has two 6/6 windows flanking the exterior end brick chimney. The window to the west is finished with louvered shutters, wood sills, and molded surrounds. The opening to the east has narrower surrounds and was added in the latter part of the 20th century.

Interior

The interior of the building has a side-passage, double-pile plan with a two-room ell. The wood floors are trimmed with eight-inch high baseboards with ogee caps. All of the openings have reeded casings of wood with backbanding. The elongated window openings of the front parlor are further detailed with ornate panels set upon the sills. The ceiling of this parlor is detailed by a plaster crown molding with an astragal profile and reeded base. The double-wide opening from the side-passage to the front parlor originally was filled with sliding doors that have since been removed. Additionally, the mantel that ornamented the chimney breast on the northwest wall has been removed and the opening filled with plaster.

The rear parlor, which lacks the crown molding and paneling below the window sills, has been altered by the removal of the original Victorian-era mantel. The projecting chimney breast exposes the brick construction with two corbeled brick courses supporting the ogee-molded mantel shelf. The top of the chimney, where it meets the ceiling, has a narrow ogee-molded crown molding. The straight-flight stair is set along the northeast wall of the rear parlor, and is accessible from the north corner of the space. The altered stair has an enclosed stringer and is devoid of a balustrade and newel. Originally, the stair was fully enclosed behind a paneled door, but has subsequently been partially opened. At the second story, the enclosed stair has also been partially opened and a skylight cut into the ceiling.

The ell and one-story addition contain the modern kitchen, laundry, and half-bath. Built-in shelving with beaded cabinets and glass doors has been installed in the east corner of the kitchen. The vinyl floor of the kitchen is laid over the original wood floor. Beaded wainscot and square-butt wood shingles have been applied to the plaster walls. A quarter-flight stair to the second floor is located in the north corner of the ell.

The second floor consists of several bedrooms and a full bath. The carpeted floors have square-capped baseboards, and the casings are reeded. The mantels have been removed and the subsequent pipe stove openings infilled with plaster.

Hollingsworth sold the two lots along with the building at 131-133 Charles Street to George Wells for $3,025.

Born in 1800, George Wells, Jr. was a prominent citizen of Annapolis, serving as president of the Farmers National Bank and in the Maryland Senate, as well as manager of the Annapolis & Elk Ridge Railroad. Wells had begun purchasing property, both improved and undeveloped, throughout Annapolis in the 1820s. By the 1840s, Wells had accumulated all of the parcels fronting Charles Street, which included the Adams-Kilty House at 133 Charles Street and the Jonas Green House at 124 Charles Street.

By the third quarter of the 19th century, Wells had overextended himself financially. Consequently, he mortgaged his landholdings to the Farmers Bank of Maryland in 1877. Wells immediately defaulted on the loans and was forced to sell his property on Charles Street, Duke of Gloucester Street, Market Street, South Street, Cathedral Street, Carroll Street, North West Street, and Bladens Street. Alexander Randall was appointed trustee of the estate, and charged with overseeing the subdivision and sale of the land. The property along Charles Street, which included Parcels 28, 30, 31, and 32, was subdivided to create 25 individual lots to be sold at public auction. The sale, completed by 1881, yielded $16,563 for Wells to pay his creditors. Lot 53 in Parcel 30 was divided into eight smaller plots, which were sold individually.

Building History

The portion of the lot where the building at 111 Charles Street was later erected was purchased by carpenter Isaac Morehouse for $2.55 a foot in 1878. The final sale was listed at $102 for thirty feet of unimproved property fronting Charles Street. The census records for 1880 show that Isaac and Ellen Morehouse occupied the dwelling at 119 Charles Street (AA-390), which was erected by Morehouse in 1878. Morehouse and his wife were originally from New York, born in 1818 and 1824, respectively. Between 1880 and 1882, Morehouse constructed the modest building at 111-113 Charles Street as speculative housing. By 1891, he erected the dwelling at 115 Charles Street on the southwest elevation of 117 Charles Street, which Morehouse had erected by 1885. The construction of this fifth building completed the row of abutting dwellings on the property Morehouse had purchased from Randall in 1878.

Retaining ownership of 115-117 Charles Street, Morehouse conveyed the property at 111 Charles Street in 1882 to Henry Lynde. The 1900 and 1910 census records that the Italianate style dwelling was owned and occupied by Mary C. Lyndi and her son, William R. Shields. The owner of 111 Charles Street upon the death of his mother in 1925, Shields was a barber, born in 1862. In 1889, Shields had purchased the property at 107 Charles Street, and in 1893, for a cost of $1000, he purchased 109 Charles Street.

By 1920, the census documents Frank Kries living in the dwelling. A plumber, Kries was born in 1865. The census records indicate Kries owned the property, although no deeds of conveyance support this. By 1929, the city directory records that William Shields was again living in the modest dwelling at 111 Charles Street.

With the death of William Shields in July 1935, ownership of the property was disputed. Shields had never married, had no children or siblings, and neglected to prepare a last will and testament for the division of his landholdings. Consequently, a number of cousins, aunts, and uncles laid claim to the property on Charles Street. The court ordered the sale of the land and improvements, an order greatly supported by Shields' relatives.

In January 1937, trustee Roscoe C. Rowe conveyed 111 Charles Street at public auction to Arthur E. and Ella V. Jones, cousins of Shields, for $2,000. The property was conveyed just five years later to Noah A. and Amelia Hillman, with half interest transferred to Bernard and Rose Legum. A prominent attorney, alderman, and Mayor of Annapolis, Hillman was a graduate of the University of Baltimore Law School. The Hillmans and Legums retained ownership of 111 Charles Street, which they utilized as rental property, until 1944. It was purchased by widow Carrie E. Dammeyer, who resided in the building until 1958. It was conveyed at that time to T & W, Inc., which used the single-family dwelling as investment property. During the eight year tenure of the company, the building was leased to a number of residents, including former owner Carrie Dammeyer.

In March 1966, Douglas Haig Pugh, III and his wife, Mary Poindexter Pugh, purchased the building. The Pughs leased it to Jane Smith in 1961, and Anne M. Barba in 1965. Martin and Jane Snider bought the property in 1971, which they conveyed in 1976 to Shelly R. and Nancy A. Brammer. In 1978, it was sold to W.P. Dinsmoor White, who conveyed the building to present owner/occupant Steven W. Vanderbosch.
