This school house, shown in the 1877 atlas of Baltimore County, is now the fellowship hall of Oakland United Methodist Church. Built in a functional style, it is a brick building three bays deep, set on a high stone foundation. The building has a tin gable roof and a high front entrance porch. There are two chimneys, an old one of brick and a recent one of concrete block (external).

The building was sold off by the Board of Education in 1933. The old School Commissioners had acquired three lots here in 1872.
