DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Constructed of stone, this two and a half story duplex faces west toward the quarry and is located about ten feet back from the road. The centralized building plan is rectangular in shape with a projecting back wing. The house is four bays wide and has a gable roof. Two brick chimneys are located at both ends of the roof ridge. The house rests on a stone foundation and has rusticated quoins at the corners.

There are two entrance doors found in the center two bays of the duplex. Both are plain wooden doors with plain wooden trim. The two outside windows on the first floor of the west facade are two over two double hung sash windows. They have plain white wooden trim and a flat brick arch on the top. The second story has four, six over six double hung sash windows all of which have flat brick arches. Found in the attic story are four knee windows which are three over three double hung sash windows. Directly above the windows is a dentilled wooden cornice which does not quite extend the length of the four bays.

The duplex is about two bays deep, and there are no windows on either ends of the building. There is a brick addition on the southeast side of the house. It is one story and has a gable roof with a brick chimney on the east end. Adjoining this wing on the northeast side is a two story shingle addition.

A small shed is found in the backyard.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

An important element of a nineteenth century streetscape, this stone dwelling represents an architectural style typical of small towns and rural areas in Maryland. The builders made use of natural materials from the area, building with stone possibly from one of the local quarries. It is a duplex which has proven to be typical of the settlement patterns in Texas.
